Hauptmann Gets Stay
Fear Worst Punishment

Hauptmann, his death again postponed, has 48 more hours of certain life, plus the possibilities of the final outcome of a strangely-mixed murder case.

The brief stay, granted because another had "confessed" the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby, was to give a grand jury investigating that new turn in the case time to complete its inquiry.

It came at the close of a day of great anxieties, and uncertainties, almost as Hauptmann was to start on that "LAST MARCH," from which no man returns.

It had been a day of terror and tears for Hauptmann. Every detail for his execution had been completed.

Civilization that kills a man for killing another sticks to the custom of giving him more than he can eat before killing him. To Hauptmann's cell early in the morning a guard took corn flakes, poached eggs, coffee, toast. Hauptmann, told that he could have anything else he wanted, ate nothing. Guards said that he had wept a good deal, his nerve having at last given way; he had spent the night from ten to five in the morning, writing at great length to his mother in Germany.

A well known American frequently says, in speeches: "It is not so much the length of the step, as the direction."

After long waiting, Richard Bruno Hauptmann, last night, was to have taken a few steps, only a few steps, in a direction away from this world to the coffin and whatever comes afterwards. A short walk, with the prison clergyman beside him, along the prison corridor, two steps through the door of the death house, very convenient, in that prison, seven steps across the chamber of death to the electric chair; then a long journey.

After those seven steps across the death chamber, come the application of the electrodes on skull and leg, and the strapping down, there is no sensation, no pain. The real punishment is horrible fear, with some, although it does not seem to prevent murders, it is the dread of what may come beyond the grave. Many murderers believe that the Creator of the universe tortures forever the most imperfect specimens of His handiwork. The worry must add to the punishment.

An ordinary murder racketeer named Zied, who killed a policeman, scheduled to die just ahead of Hauptmann, with no one interested in him, said: "I'm not worrying, for I know I've got to go."

Robert Elliott, 67 years old, electric executioner for five states, says he does not care what is said about his profession. Each time he sends a criminal on the long journey he is paid $150. He does not pass sentence, or make the laws. Somebody must "throw the electric switch," or spin the wheel and send the current through the man. He has no responsibility, but Sing Sing prison officials say that he is growing nervous, his hands begin to tremble.

Men executed have no feeling against the executioner. He is only part of the machinery; sometimes they shake hands with him.

Dickens' "Pickwick Papers" was published 100 years ago Monday last; the day was celebrated by repeating with real horses, coach and human imitations of Mr. Pickwick and his friend, the famous stagecoach drive from London to Rochester.

See that your children read "Pickwick Papers," a delight to any intelligent child past twelve years of age. If you do not know Mr. Pickwick, Alfred Jimple, Sergeant Buzfuz, the famous Bardwell versus Pickwick breach of promise case, get the book and read it now. All human nature is in it. No book can take its place.

Mussolini's position in Ethiopia interests England more, as Italians draw near to control of Lake Tana, high in the Ethiopian mountains. The Blue Nile starts in that lake, wanders down to join the Great Nile that irrigates old Egypt, and the British Sudan, with big plans for making England independent of Yankee cotton. All those plans, and the very life of Egypt, depend on the waters of the Nile.

For hundreds of miles south of the great Delta, where it empties into the Mediterranean, the Nile goes through a hot sandy country, not a single tributary contributing any water.

Haile Selassie, in nominal control of Lake Tana and the source of the Blue Nile, meant nothing. Mussolini might mean a great deal, cutting off water and off life, ruining Britain's imperial plans.

RUSSIANS AID IN ROUTING JAPANESE

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press

Moscow, April 1—Official advices from Mongolia stated today that a battle lasting more than 24 hours between Mongolians and Manchoukuoans had ended after the Manchoukuoan and allied Japanese had been forced to retreat from Mongolian territory.

The official dispatches did not mention casualties. (Tokyo dispatches declared there had been heavy losses on both sides.)

The announcement arrived in Moscow shortly after other dispatches from the eastern border had stated that the Japanese and Manchoukuoan troops had received reinforcements of men, field guns, tanks and airplanes.

Soviet sources said they had no doubt that the fighting was taking place on Mongolian territory and that the Japanese and Manchoukuoans had crossed the frontier from Manchoukuo.

(The Japanese general headquarters at Hsinking, Manchoukuo, asserted that the fighting was

Wife Pays Visit to Bruno

Trenton, N. J., April 1 (AP)—Anna Hauptmann went to State Prison today for another visit with her husband, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, whose execution last night was stayed at the last minute.

She had seen him on Monday, at which time she bade him, "auf wiedersehen" (till we meet again).

It was shortly after one o'clock when the woman, who had fully expected to be a widow today, arrived at the prison.

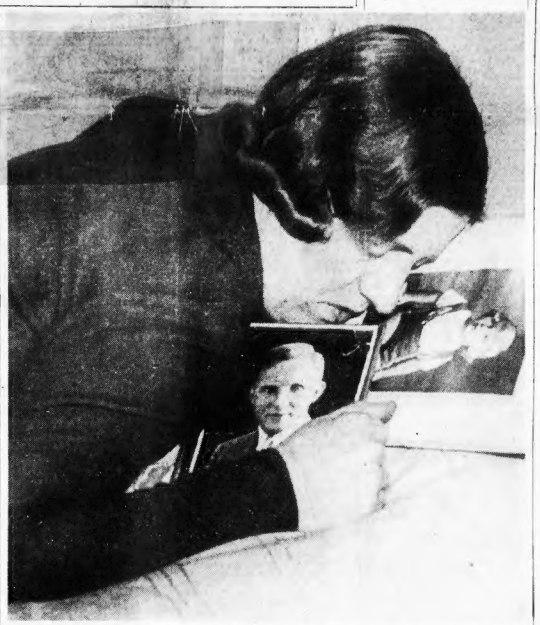
She was wearing a brown checked suit. Her face was serious. Without a word to those gathered outside, she went through the door. She was expected to stay about half an hour in the death house.

STOCKS STRONG

New York, April 1 (INS)—The stock market turned in a creditable performance today, chalking up early gains running to $3 and then extending these as the session progressed.

Market Reports on Pages 21, 22.

BRUNO WIFE'S SORROW EASED



"I knew it! I knew it couldn't happen!" declared Anna Hauptmann, when she was told of Bruno's 48-hour stay. Earlier, with all hope seemingly lost that her husband would be saved from the electric chair, she appeared on the verge of collapse. Stretched across her hotel bed in Trenton, N. J., she gazed sadly at the pictures of her Richard and their child, Mannfried.

BRUNO'S EXECUTION FRIDAY INDICATED BY KIMBERLING

BULLETINS

Trenton, N. J., April1 (INS)—Several wild rumors were in circulation here that a safety deposit box had beendiscovered containing some Lindbergh ransom bills. The rumor was unverified, however, and responsible authorities were skeptical.

Trenton, N. J., April 1 (INS)—One source close to the Mercer County grand jury reported that six of the inquisitors are arguing strongly for an indictment in the Wendel case. Several jurors are said to be "on the fence," and some are convinced the charges against Wendel are "ridiculous."

Trenton, N. J., April 1 (INS)—Bruno Hauptmann's electrocution probably will be set for next Friday night, Colonel Mark O. Kimberling, warden of the New Jersey state prison, said in a telephone conversation today.

Trenton, N. J., April 1 (AP)—The possibility of Bruno Richard Hauptmann escaping the death chair beyond tomorrow night grew today as the Mercer County grand jury delayed until tomorrow morning further consideration of the Paul H. Wendel alleged confessions of the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

By KENNETH T. DOWNS

Trenton, N. J., April 1—After spectacularly saving the life of Bruno Richard Hauptmann a few minutes before he was to go to the electric chair, the runaway Mercer county grand jury today prepared for further deliberations.

The inquisitorial body, which now unquestionably holds the fate of Hauptmann in its hands, will resume its deliberations tomorrow morning to decide whether to indict Paul Wendel, a disbarred Trenton attorney, for the crime for which Hauptmann stands convicted.

If the grand jury returns a true bill against Wendel—it will require votes of 12 of its 23 members to do this—Hauptmann will not be executed for months, possibly never, it was learned from an unimpeachable source. If Wendel is indicted, Governor Hoffman will no

FLOOD-BOUND COUPLE FOUND DEAD IN HOME

Springfield, April 1—Under circumstances which brought a police investigation, Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Copeland were found dead today in an upstairs bedroom of their home at 101 Abbe avenue, a cottage which had been in the flood area.

The discovery was made by a friend, Joseph T. St. Onge of 281 Dwight street extension, who told police he understood the couple had been evacuated during the flood, which rose to the second floor of their home.

St. Onge said he had gone to the house Friday, had opened the front door and called, but received no response. When he received no reply again today, he investigated and found the couple.

The body of the wife, Mrs. Mary A. Copeland, was lying across the bed and Copeland's body was seated in a chair.

St. Onge called Dr. Edward J. Roy, who was passing. The physician said the couple had been dead some time.

With the medical examiner, Dr. Roy expressed belief tentatively that the couple probably had returned to their home after the floods, had started a fire and had died from the effects of coal gas. An autopsy will be performed, however.

Curley Is Kept In Bed by Doctor

Governor Curley, ill at his home in Jamaicaway, Jamaica Plain, with grippe and a sore throat, may be out of his office until next week, it was learned at the house today.

Dr. Martin J. English, the Governor's personal physician, found he was running a slight temperature today and forbid the Governor to leave his bed.

Several hundred men seeking work gathered outside the Jamaicaway house, the biggest throng of job-seekers thus far, but were told the Governor was ill and could see nobody.

Governor Curley contracted his ailment originally while inspecting the flood areas, and his attempts to fight it off were unsuccessful.

4 DIE IN MAINE REFUGEE FIRE

Farmington, Me., April 1 (AP)—Four members of the family of Clement O. Luce died today in a fire which destroyed the home they moved into last Saturday from the flood-damaged house they occupied.

The dead: Luce's wife, Laura, 35, and their children, Warren, 8; Clement, Jr., 3, and Donna May, 10 months.

Luce was burned on the face and was in a critical condition in Franklin County Hospital.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, aroused Luce from sleep. The house aflame and himself burned, he rushed out to seek the help of neighbors.

POLITICS SEEN BEHIND DEATH DELAY FOR BRUNO

CRAZIEST OF MURDER CASES, SAYS AUTHOR COOPER

By COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER
International News Service Special Correspondent

Trenton, N. J., April 1—What a perfect time, All Fools' Day, to be filing a yarn like this! For Bruno Richard Hauptmann's all-too-miraculous luck held again. The question of when, as and if the convicted murderer of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., goes to the electric chair again is thrown into the middle of the gambling table until tomorrow night at least, and perhaps for months or years.

Nobody knows the answer. We had been summoned for the last search for guns, cameras or what not before proceeding to the execution chamber when the news cut through the prison like a streak of blue flame.

In a way it was a startling surprise. Viewed from another angle, it was only confirmation of what our inner consciousness had told us, even as we had moved through the solid lines of blue-coated state policeman, presented our execution invitations at the heavily barred doors of state prison and awaited the order for the death march.

All day long it had been drummed into us from a dozen different directions:

"Take it from us. Something is going to happen. That fellow's not going tonight."

HEARD ON ALL SIDES

It had come from police officials, from persons close to the Governor's office, from others who knew high politicians, from still others familiar with the workings of Ellis Parker, the Burlington County detective.

And as early as 7:30 o'clock, as we waited in the office of Mark O. Kimberling, warden of the prison, to begin the march to the execution chamber, Robert E. Hicks, head of Governor Harold G. Hoffman's crew of investigators, called me to one side.

"Hauptmann isn't going to go," he said in a low voice.

"But here we are," I answered. "The executioner is in the death chamber soaking his electrodes. They've shaved Hauptmann's head. He's written a last appeal to the governor to save him. Mrs. Hauptmann has given up hope."

The investigator smiled.

"I told her at 8:30 that her husband wouldn't go."

ALL PRESENT

"But you're here, as the official representative of the governor, to be on hand if there is a last-minute confession from the condemned man. So are Capt. John Lamb and Lieut. Arthur Keaton of the state police. There's are warden. Like a man with a load of lead on his shoulders. Look at Lloyd Fisher over there. Did you ever see a more unhappy attorney for the defense?"

"I'm telling you," answered Governor Hoffman's emissary, "he isn't going. Maybe Thursday night, maybe Friday night—but it's ten to one he doesn't sit in the chair tonight."

Less than an hour later, we were all in the street again, listening to the roar of shouting crowds which had been massing since early morning, dodging through the hum and tangle of traffic, such as usually only comes from a circus lot.

Governor Hoffman's investigator evidently had been running on an inside tip. Bruno Richard Hauptmann again had been saved from the electric chair.

JURY IN SESSION

How did it all come about? Well, there's a grand jury in session for one thing. Then there is the statement of a man who is closer to Harold G. Hoffman at this particular moment than even his political advisors:

"It's political suicide for the governor if he doesn't find some way to save Hauptmann. When Hauptmann goes, the governor's political future is strapped into the chair also. This is far more serious than merely the death of a man accused of murder.

"Why look here, can't you understand that Hoffman had the best chance in the world to be Vice-President? He's playing against luck now, but he's got to keep on drawing cards — hoping he'll fill an inside straight and convince the world that Hauptmann didn't commit that murder!"

BIG SHOW

However, even before the statement of Mr. Hicks, even the candid remarks quoted above, there had been an occurrence which to astute newspaper men indicated that the blaze of lights from the movie sound truck gleaming upon the queerly carved prison entrance of Egyptian architecture, the grinding of newsreel cameras, the concentration of police and fire departments, the massing of thousands in automobiles and on foot, all had been for nothing.

That came in a hurried summoning of news writers at 5:30 o'clock and the brief announcement that upon the application of Rabbi Abraham Holtzerg, spiritual adviser, and upon the basis of new investigations, death would not reach out for Charles Zied, Philadelphia gangster condemned to die as a preview to the execution of Hauptmann.

Perhaps the most surprised person of all was Zied himself. He had resigned himself to death. He had believed himself without a friend in the world.

OLD-TIMERS CYNICAL

So amazed was he at postponement of death that only the excitement of the deathhouse, celebrating in his good fortune, pulled him out of blank-faced astonishment.

And when old-timers heard that news, they looked cynically about them, at the tremendous concentration of typewriters, tables, telegraphers, writers and "wire-bugs" of the makeshift press room in the block-house of the prison, and remarked cynically:

"Zied was to go as a preview for the taking off of Hauptmann. Now he's being reprieved in the same way. Get set for a flash:

"Hauptmann Saved Again!"

It all came true, just like the tips had pictured it ever since early morning. More than that, when Lloyd Fisher rushed through the cell-blocks to the death-house, there to carry what he believed to be astonishing news to Bruno Richard Hauptmann, he failed to find the broken, half-hysterical man who had sobbed and paced and stared dazedly about him through the agony of a sleepless night and a foodless day.

BRUNO HIMSELF AGAIN

Cold Richard was himself again, as though mysterious flashes had permeated even into his place of barred retreat. He received the news without an apparent tremor. This man had been within 15 minutes of death. Condemned to go at 8:20, he did not receive Fisher's news of postponement until 8:05. Somehow it failed to surprise this man, who, only a few hours before, had addressed a final appeal to the governor, beginning:

"My writing is not for fear of losing my life, this is in the hands of God, it is His will. I will go gladly. It means the end of my tremendous suffering."

Yet when the joyous Lloyd Fisher came into the death house, with his great news, it was the old, cold Hauptmann who greeted him. The shaved head, made ready for the upper electrode, the slit trouser leg —these things had ceased to affect him.

OBVIOUS TIP

Could he have learned in those last few hours that Governor Hoffman had spent most of the entire day in concentrated attention upon the deliberations of a new and bizarre development of the case?

Could he have known that the Mercer County Grand Jury was in session under the foremanship of Allyne Freeman, a prominent member of Hoffman's political party and a possible candidate for assemblyman, convened for the express purpose of passing upon a possible indictment charging that Paul Wendel, until now, only another looney angle of this amazing case, actually did kidnap and murder the Lindbergh child?

Could he have been informed that Hoffman had determined that in the event of an indictment he would command Warden Kimberling to bring about a postponement, and in addition summon Attorney General Wilentz and demand that action be begun at once for a slay of Hauptmann's execution?

NEAR COLLAPSE

Certainly something must have happened. Only a few hours before, Bruno Richard Hauptmann had knelt on the floor of his cell and in a voice so broken as to be almost inaudible, tried to make his peace with his God.

Then suddenly, while a world believed him quaking on the threshold of death, he had become calm and cold again, once more enigmatical, poised, full of assurance. It doesn't make sense.

For that matter, nothing seems logical in this most wacky of lunatic cases. After the first flush of his arrest had faded, Paul Wendel, disbarred attorney, one-time inmate of a goofy-house, so-called repeater at monetary crime, had dropped farther and farther into the background.

CONFESSION FOR SALE

He had made a rambling confession, seemingly as full of holes as a rusted sieve, in which he had "admitted" the kidnaping and killing of the Lindbergh baby.

Then he made an equally amazing repudiation in which it was himself who had been kidnaped instead of the baby. Robert W. Hicks, official investigator for the governor, himself stated last night that he had been approached by persons a month ago who had attempted to "sell" him the Paul Wendel arrest and that he not only refused to touch it but had instructed his investigative staff to keep its hands off.

The Board of Pardons heard the matter thrashed out during clemency hearings Monday. Yesterday afternoon Judge Trenchard refused to entertain a last-minute plea for a stay of execution based on the Wendel affair.

Erwin Marshall, prosecutor for Mercer county, had expressed himself as indignant that a charge of murder ever should have been entered against the man. But here was the grand jury, 23 members assembled under the leadership of a Republican foreman, and wrangling like mad over the question of whether to indict or not to indict—and all this while Bruno Richard Hauptmann, his head shaved and the electric chair tested, awaited death.

ACCUSES PARKER

Wendel, it must be added, insisted that he was arrested and held without warrant in a gimpy-minded asylum by Ellis Parker, detective, and advisor to Governor Hoffman on matters of detection and apprehension.

Nor did the passage of time, or even the 48-hour postponement of Hauptmann's execution, end the grotesque developments. The grand jury held witnesses and argued and wrangled until 1 o'clock this morning. It adjourned, announcing that it had come to no decision in the Wendel case.

After more than 12 hours of concentrated deliberation, in which the impression had been created that an earnest effort was being made without result to end the argument for or against the disbarred attorney in a single session, the news was given forth that today only routine matters would occupy its attention.

CONVENE AGAIN

Thursday, said a spokesman, the grand jury again will take up the Wendel matter. On that same night Hauptmann is supposed to die. But Warden Kimberling announced last night that he will refuse to send the man to the chair as long as the grand jury is considering a possible indictment for Wendel.

If Hauptmann does not die by next Sunday midnight, his case will present the muddled appearance of a case of eggs under a steam roller. So if you fail to understand this, give a thought to me, who is trying to explain it.

Everywhere I look there are squirrels running up and down with plug hats on, and dressed in ballet skirts. Tomorrow I shall be queen of the May.

When Warden Kimberling Gave Bruno 48 Hours to Live

Colonel Mark O. Kimberling, warden of the New Jersey state prison, at Trenton, N. J., was snapped among reporters, cameramen and state police, as he stood in the prison. He had just folded a paper, seen in his hand, which contained the proclamation that Hauptmann would not die for at least 48 hours. What will Thursday bring?

Borah To Enter N. J. Primaries

Washington, April 1 (INS)—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho decided today to enter his name in the New Jersey Republican Presidential primary.

The New Jersey primary will be held May 19 and 323 delegates will be at stake.

SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENTS WAITED IN WENDEL PROBE

Trenton, N. J., April 1 (AP)—New developments impended today in the Lindbergh case, still reeling from the last minute halting of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution last night.

The new break, the nature of which was not disclosed, promised to come from the Mercer County grand jury's investigation of charges that the murder of the baby Lindbergh was done by Paul H. Wendel, now held under a formal charge in the county jail here.

The Mercer County prosecutor, Erwin Marshall, announced that the jury's investigation, scheduled to have been resumed this afternoon, had been deferred until tomorrow morning to permit him to inquire into circumstances surrounding Wendel's "detention" at Mt. Holly in February by the nationally known Burlington County detective chief, Ellis H. Parker.

Parker, conducting his own unofficial investigation of the Lindbergh murder in the firm belief that Hauptmann was not guilty of the crime, is the man who obtained the three "confessions" which Wendel subsequently repudiated, but which were largely the basis on which the grand jury won the delay in Hauptmann's execution plans last night.

The exact nature of today's expected development could not be made public immediately, a high source said, but it was indicated it would be sensational.

With Marshal's announcement that the witnesses would appear in connection with the "detention" of Wendel in Burlington County, it was apparent that all phases—including the murder charge against the man in Mercer County—would come before the grand jury.

John Kafes, Wendel's attorney, announced today that Wendel had asked the grand jury for permission to appear before it today, and that he believed he could show the alleged "confessions" were untrue, and that there had been "a conspiracy to obstruct justice."

Kafes said Wendel was ready to waive immunity.

RICHTER QUITS, RAPS DEWING

Assistant District Attorney Hibbard Richter of Plymouth and Norfolk counties resigned today and asserted District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing had demanded his resignation because of political reasons.

Dewing, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Attorney General denied politics had anything to do with it and said Richter requested permission to quit.

The district attorney appointed Thomas W. Prince of Brockton in place of Richter. The latter had held the office only five months.

Richter hinted that his retirement had some connection with the bill, now before the legislature, to have separate district attorneys for Norfolk and Plymouth. Plymouth County lawyers claimed they did not have adequate representation in Dewing's office. Today's change places a Plymouth County man in the office in place of Richter, who lives in Brookline, a Norfolk County town.

GOV. HOFFMAN'S HOME GUARDED

South Amboy, N. J., April 1 (AP)—Two plain clothes men today guarded the home of Governor Harold G. Hoffman.

It could not be learned whether they had been stationed there because of any threats against the governor's family or simply as a precautionary move.

While the governor was in Trenton awaiting developments in the Bruno Richard Hauptmann case, Mrs. Hoffman was at home with their three daughters, Ada, Hope and Lillie.

A 24-hour guard was established at the governor's home several weeks ago but was withdrawn after a few days.

BRUNO RICHARD HAUPTMANN

"Last Mile" Walk Halted

'GOTT, I Am So Glad,' BRUNO

By GEORGE LAIT

State Prison, Trenton, N. J., April 1 (US)—"Gott, I am very, very grateful!"

That was Bruno Richard Hauptmann's breathless thanks to C. Lloyd Fisher, his faithful attorney, and the Rev. John Matthiesen, his spiritual adviser, who informed him that a 48-hour postponement of execution had been granted him.

After gasping out his gratitude Hauptmann moved feebly back from the bars of his cell door and slumped onto a stool. For several minutes he kept muttering over and over again:

"Gott, I am so glad. I am so glad."

Then, regaining control of his emotions, Hauptmann rose from his seat and declared:

"This will be a turning point in my course, I am sure. I knew God would not let them kill me because I am innocent. I knew something would happen to save me."

As Hauptmann stood in his cell, the right leg of his trousers, already slit from knee to ankle in order that the executioner could strap the lethal electrode to his bare leg, flapped grotesquely.

The other inmates of the death house quickly understood what had passed between the condemned man, the lawyer and the minister, and shouts of "Atta boy, Bruno," and "Good luck" came to the joyful German from his death house companions.

Fisher remained with Hauptmann in the death house for some time after the execution had been postponed, speaking in a low voice through the bars with his client.

Robert Elliott, gaunt-faced executioner, did not throw the switch on Bruno Richard Hauptmann last night. He is shown here hiding his face from the camera as he entered Trenton state prison under heavy guard before Warden Kimberling granted a death-door stay to the doomed man.

Last Lizzie Borden Case Juror Dies

Taunton, April 1—Death last Sunday at Providence, R. I., of John C. Finn, retired employe of the Taunton postoffice, took the last member of the jury which sat on the famous Lizzie Borden case of 1892, it was revealed today.

The prominent and wealthy parents of Lizzie Borden were murdered with an axe at Fall River, on August 4, 1892. Her trial, which attracted international attention, resulted in her acquittal. Lizzie is now dead.

KIDNAP Ladder Board TRACED

Washington, April 1 (AP)—Arch W. Loney, WPA materials expert, said today he had urged Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey to investigate the origin of the board from which part of the Lindbergh kidnaping ladder reportedly was made.

Loney said a carpenter named Boyer told him that a 20-foot board was bought from the National Lumber Company—the Bronx firm which had sold lumber to Bruno Richard Hauptmann—a week after Hauptmann's arrest.

"It looks like somebody bought the board and put it in Hauptmann's home," Loney, who last week accompanied the governor on an inspection trip, told newspapermen.

Loney said Hoffman telephoned here about 4:30 yesterday afternoon to ask if he had any additional suggestions beyond his previous report.

"I told the governor," Loney said, "he ought to investigate whether a 20-foot board, 1 by 6 inches, was bought from the National Lumber Company. He said he would."

The state had contended the famous "Rail 16" of the kidnap ladder was made from a section of a board in Hauptmann's attic. Loney said the section of the ladder is 8 feet 6 inches, and the remaining part of the board is now 13 feet.

He added that he became interested in the origin of the board because, from the construction of the attic, he had not expected to find one. On one side, he said, there are 13 tongue and groove boards. He added that on the other there also are 13 plus the shortened board.

Further, Loney said, the tongue and groove portion would have been damaged had it actually been ripped out of the attic flooring as contended by the state.

Lindberghs Not Told

Weald, Kent, Eng., April 1 (AP)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh awoke in their ancient Kent home today without knowledge that the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the slaying of their kidnaped first son had been postponed.

A source close to the family said the Lindberghs and their second son, Jon, retired early last night—the night Hauptmann was to be electrocuted at Trenton, N. J.—without making any arrangements to be notified of the event.

Bruno's Sister Sure He'll Win

Los Angeles, April 1 (INS)—Confident that "48 hours is long enough" to prove her brother's innocence, Mrs. Emma Gloeckner, sister of Bruno Richard Hauptman, today intensified her efforts to save him from the New Jersey electric chair.

Weeping tears of joy, Mrs. Gloeckner received news of the 48-hour stay granted the condemned Lindbergh baby killer while she was prostrate here.

"Thank God!" she wept. "With this additional time I feel Richard's innocence will be proved."

Betty Gow Has Nothing to Say

Glasgow, April 1 (INS)—Betty Gow, former Lindbergh baby nurse, now employed in a dressmaking establishment here, refused to comment today on the postponement of Hauptmann's execution.

$30 does the trick at Bond's

—and this includes two trousers

This is not a sale! Indeed no! It is much more important than a mere "here today and gone tomorrow" offering. It is clean-cut, vibrant proof of how profitable it is for you to buy clothes direct from the maker. ★ Now you are probably saying "I've known that right along—what's new about it?" Well, just this—when it comes to the superb quality and matchless style of Rochester-tailored clothes, there's only one retailer in the United States who can say "direct from our own factory in Rochester". That retailer is Bond. ★ Were we to buy these luxuriously fine suits in the open market, they would have to sell for $42.50. Made by Rochester's master-tailors, in our own Rochester factory, the tariff is only $30 (including 2 trousers). ★ This Spring, enjoy the distinguished appearance and soundly built quality for which Rochester clothes are famous. They cost very little, when you buy them at Bond!

'Knew It Couldn't Be'

BRUNO WIFE KEPT FAITH

By DOROTHY ROE

Trenton, N. J., April 1—"I knew it! I knew it! I knew it couldn't happen!"

Faithful Anna Hauptmann, who had clung stubbornly to hope throughout the long day that was to be the last of life for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, burst into grateful sobs as, just at the hour when her husband was scheduled to die, Warden Mark O. Kimberling's secretary telephoned from the prison the news of a 48-hour reprieve.

She clasped her hands and muttered a prayer of thanks. Then she tried to find words to call up her little son, Mannfried, who is staying with friends in the Bronx.

She was laughing and crying at once as she spoke in staccato German phrases, and then broke into English:

"Your daddy will come home to you yet, Bubi. Oh, it will be all right, all right."

She spoke as if the baby were an adult, capable of understanding the tragedy and the sudden return of hope.

There was a calm triumph in his eyes.

Throughout the day she had said, over and over—

"Something will happen. I know it. They can't do this to Richard. He is not a kidnaper, and I'm not a kidnaper's wife.

"The truth will come out. It's bound to."

When even Hauptmann's loyal counsel, C. Lloyd Fisher, had apparently given up hope, Mrs. Hauptmann refused to believe that the end had come.

There was quiet conviction in her voice as she proclaimed her confidence:

"I know nothing is going to happen."

Sends 2 Cables

After an earlier breakdown, she sat quietly by the window, her eyes fastened on the dim outlines of the prison, her lips moving in an occasional prayer, hope still in her straining eyes.

It was as if she had a foreknowledge of coming events, when at last the long-awaited word came.

She was a woman vindicated, her prayers once more answered, as she cried softly:

"Of course! Of course! I knew it all along."

Mrs. Hauptmann then sent two identical cables to her husband's mother in Kamenz, Germany, and her own family in Wuerttemburg:

"Don't worry. Our prayers will be answered in full. Love from Richard, Bubi and Anny."

As the minutes dragged on, and the hands of the clock moved always nearer to the fatal hour of 8 p. m.—the hour that was to bring life, not death for her husband—Mrs. Hauptmann huddled in a chair by the window in her darkened room, her eyes straining through the dusk toward the faint gray outlines of the state prison, barely visible on the horizon.

Inside the prison they had been preparing to administer the last rites to Hauptmann, and the hope that has sustained his wife through the long months of waiting was fast slipping away.

Her face was the face of an old woman, drawn and gray, and she muttered half-intelligible phrases, perhaps to herself, perhaps to the man in the death cell, tasting his last few minutes of life. Her voice, less lips moved, and she murmured:

"Richard—they can't take you now. Don't give up hope, my Richard. There is yet time."

Church Bell Tolls

Loudly in the dusk a church bell across the street tolled the hour of 7:30 services.

Mrs. Hauptmann shivered, pressed her hands against her ears, and whispered:

"No, no—it can't be. Only a half hour. Something has to happen."

It is a frightening thing to watch a fellow human being facing the tragic climax of a lifetime—the end of hope.

Two of us sat with the white-faced woman during her hours of vigil.

She clasped the picture of her husband against her bosom and held the picture of her baby in her lap. Occasionally she murmured:

"I'm not sitting in this bedroom, Richard—I'm really with you now."

Later she turned with a gesture of desperation, and cried:

"Oh, why don't they bring the word that he is saved? Why do they take so long? They must come—you know they must."

And a minute later she said softly:

"Richard told me that I must always keep our baby in the sunshine—that I must teach him to love the sunshine and the green grass and all the beautiful things in the world. How can I teach him to love, when all the world is teaching me to hate!"

The hands of the clock said ten minutes to eight. Mrs. Hauptmann received word that Warden Kimberling was holding up action at the prison pending outcome of the grand jury hearing of Wendel, the former Trenton lawyer whose last minute confession to the kidnapping was just another of the things that couldn't happen in this incredible case.

She nodded gravely, and said:

"Yes, of course. I know nothing's going to happen."

Then she broke out:

"You know Richard is not a kidnaper. And I'm not a kidnaper's wife."

As the hour which had been set for her husband's execution drew near, a physician was summoned as Mrs. Hauptmann collapsed, sobbing and hysterical. News of the reprieve swiftly revived her.

Clasping the picture of her baby, Mannfred, and that of her husband, the wife who has fought so long and loyally for the release of Hauptmann, gave way to tears.

Earlier she had said her final goodbye to her husband, but not in person.

She said it in a letter, delivered into the hands of the Rev. D. G. Werner, pastor of a Lutheran church in the Bronx and former spiritual adviser to the condemned man, who gave his solemn promise to deliver it into the hands of Bruno, by way of Warden Mark O. Kimberling's secretary.

The faithful Anna, clinging to the last shred of hope right up to the "zero hour," was told earlier that unless fate intervened, she had seen her husband for the last time.

The white-faced woman with her red-rimmed blue eyes then wrung her hands in desperation and cried:

"I can't believe it.

"It's still a dream to me. Something's going to happen. I know it is."

Has Heavy Cold

It was hard to tell when the white-faced woman was weeping, and when the tears in her eyes were caused merely by her heavy cold.

When all she could do was wait, she discussed with this reporter the comparative values of various cold cures, obviously trying to forget in aimless chatter the tragic significance of the day.

Whether or not you sympathize with Anna Hauptmann, you could not keep from admiring her courage as she sat, quietly, with folded hands, facing her zero hour.

Whether you believe, with many who have followed the case from the beginning, that she is a supreme actress, playing out to the end her difficult role—or whether you believe, with many others, that she is only the simple, loyal German wife she seems to be—you must give her credit for stamina.

No lady of high degree ever faced her life's supreme tragedy with greater dignity, or more complete faith.

Runaway Truck Crashes 2 Autos

A driverless, runaway truck threw the Winter Hill section of Somerville into a furore today as it dashed down the hill, striking two other autos and narrowly missing scores of people and autos. No one was injured, however.

Louis Little of Arcola street, Lexington, parked his vehicle in front of the Somerville Trust Co. branch at Broadway and School streets while he transacted business in the bank.

In some way the brakes became loosened, and the truck started its wild dash.

Leaping on the sidewalk some distance down the hill, the truck swerved, struck another machine parked at the curb, and then crashed into the rear of a third truck.

Taunton Wins Mill From Carolina

A reversal of the industrial trend to the South was reported before the House committee on rules today when the city of Taunton sought leave to sell municipal property to a North Carolina textile plant seeking to establish business in Massachusetts.

Taunton Mayor Arthur E. Poole, seeking the authority, said a North Carolina cotton concern was prepared to move to Taunton and start business by August 1, employing 300 persons.

There was no opposition to his request. The name of the concern was kept secret.

Devil's Beef Tub Slayer Wins Stay

Manchester, Eng., April 1 (AP)—Dr. Buck Ruxton, who was to have been hanged today for the murder of his wife and a nurse maid, still lives because of a legal move by his attorney.

The counsel appealed his conviction to a higher court, thereby automatically postponing his execution indefinitely.

Mrs. Ruxton and the servant were killed, their bodies dismembered and thrown into a Scottish border ravine known as the "Devil's Beef-Tub."

Milk Sopped

A quart of milk doubled today as a fire extinguisher.

Mrs. John Butler of New Bedford was driving her auto in Bridge street, Salem, when the motor caught fire.

Cornelius O'Leary, driver of a milk truck, seeing her difficulties, grabbed a bottle of milk and rushed over. He poured the milk on the fire and put it out.

'JAFSIE' SILENT ON BRUNO STAY

New York, April 1 (INS)—Loquacity replaced by noncommittal reserve, Dr. John F. ("Jafsie") Condon flatly refused comment today on the new lease of life granted Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

It was Jafsie's unequivocal witness-stand declaration—"John is Bruno Richard Hauptmann"—that did more than anything else to place the Bronx carpenter in the shadow of the electric chair. The "John" he referred to was the mysterious "Graveyard John" to whom Jafsie swore he paid the ransom money.

Reporters raced pell-mell to Condon's weather-beaten frame home in the Bronx to acquaint Jafsie with Hauptmann's second escape from the electric chair. They banged on his door, scuffled on the porch and demanded statements. Condon gave them the statement. It was:

"No comment."

Those two words have been his sole theme for publication since he returned from a Panama vacation several weeks ago.

Ellsworth to Get Hubbard Medal

Washington, April 1 (AP)—The National Geographic Society announced today that Lincoln Ellsworth, Arctic and Antarctic explorer, would be awarded the Hubbard gold medal ofthe society by President Roosevelt, April 15.

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the organization, said the award would be made in recognition of Ellsworth's exploratory flights in the neighborhood of both poles and particularly for his 2200 mile flight last November over unexplored territory in Antarctica.

Three Feared Lost In Plane Return

Elko, Nev., April 1 (INS)—Three weary men walked out of the snow covered mountains here today into the arms of searchers.

They were Lieutenant Newton Crumley, Jr., famed "mercy pilot"; Irving Delong and Harold Elliott, missing since Monday, when they hopped off in Crumley's plane from Reno, Nev., bound for their home here. The plane had been forced down by motor trouble.

Fishing Season Opens in Maine

North Sebago, Me., April 1 (AP)—The season opened today on Sebago Lake's landlocked salmon and trout with an army of anglers ready on the job at dawn.

One party early reported a catch of three large salmon and two trout, ranging in weight from 2½ to 6¾ pounds.

'Thank Heaven for Miracle'

MOTHER SEES NEW HOPE

Kamenz, Germany, April 1 (AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's aged mother greeted today's news of the last-minute postponement of his execution with a happy exclamation, "Thank heaven, the miracle has happened! This means new hope."

Friends had taken the 78-year-old Frau Pauline Hauptmann to their home last night to console her during the hours when her son was to die in the electric chair at Trenton, N. J., for slaying the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

All her previous references to "terror and uncertainty" were forgotten, however, as she learned that the electrocution was postponed for "at least 48 hours."

With a happy smile, she welcomed this new uncertainty—it meant hope for her son.

"It is the first good news I have had for ever so long," she said, her face, tired and lined from a night of exhaustion, freshening with joy and excitement.

"I had given up all hope for some time, and found myself mumbling prayers when the gong of the clock interrupted my sleep," she said. "I heard it strike every hour from three in the morning."

(The electrocution was set originally for 8 p. m., Tuesday—2 a. m., today, German time.)

"My innermost feelings made me quiet suddenly, "she said, "as if I had assurance that everything would be well again."

While she was talking with the Associated Press representative, a postman brought a telegram, and with a cry of joy, Frau Hauptmann exclaimed:

"Oh, this is from Richard to inform me of the good luck!"

The telegram said:

"Don't worry. Prayers will be answered fully. Love, Richard, Bubi (Hauptmann's young son), Anni."

Ohio Floods 20,000 Acres in Evansville

Evansville, Ind., April 1 (INS)—Waters of the Ohio river today covered more than 50 city blocks and 20,000 lowland acres in this vicinity as the river neared its flood crest.

All families in the flooded area have been evacuated, and WPA workers were assigned to patrol the abandoned homes to prevent looting.

Police Cars Get Second Antenna

Tests by radio engineers on the two-way radio installations in Boston police cruising cars will result in another antenna being added, officials declared today.

Engineering difficulties of using one antenna mast for both transmitting and receiving brought the decision to install a second mast. This, engineers said, will make Boston's two-way system the best in the nation.

BRUNO'S 'LAST LETTER' A PROTEST

Raps 'Sacrifice' - - Appeals to Wilentz - - Flays Reilly

Trenton, N. J., April 1 (AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann wrote a "farewell" letter to Governor Harold G. Hoffman yesterday, protesting again he was innocent and said, "In a short time I will stand before a higher judge."

"In living my last hours of my life, I wish I could bring some light in this case."

He criticized the State's case against him and asked why Dr. John F. ("Jafsie") Condon, Lindbergh ransom intermediary, "hides so many things he knows."

The text of the letter, as given out by the Governor's office, follows:

"Trenton, March 31, 1936.

"Your Excellence Governor,

"Harold G. Hoffman.

"Your Excellence:

"My writing is not for fear of losing my life, this is in the hands of God, it is His will. I will go gladly, it means the end of my tremendous suffering. Only in thinking of my dear wife and my little boy, that is breaking my heart. I know until this terrible crime is solvet, they will have to suffer under the weight of my unfair conviction.

"Not Guilty"

"For passing away, I assure Your Excellence, that I am not guilty of this crime. Over and over again, I was trying to convince the prosecution that they murder an innocent man. I offert myself to any test what science may offer—but I was beggin in vain. I did this, not to force the prosecution to put me free, but only to convince the world that I am innocent.

"In living my last hours of life, I wish I could bring some light in this case, but all what I can do, is to give a description of the friend of Mr. Fisch, whim I sah the first time when I meet Mr. Fisch. (Description I have given already, allso all the circumstances.)

"Were I connected in any part of this terrible crime, I never would have troubled Your Excellence in any way. The same I never would have ask the Court of Errors and Appeals, also the Court of Pardons to take my cause in consideration. I know in my one sense of justice that a person guilty of such a crime, can't deserve any consideration. But I was fighting with clear conscience I did have a right to do so before God and the world.

"Motive Money"

"May I ask fair thinking people—would I have been convicted of this crime without the circumstantial evidence, and them false witnesses—No! never and never. Why did people say on the witness stand they saw me near Hopewell, The motive can be only money and to play an important part in the Lindbergh case. Up to the present day I have no idea where the Lindbergh house in Hopedale is located.

"Why did, and does Dr. Condon hide so many things he knows? It is not for the course of justice that this man says everything. Why did Dr. Condon say in my cell he cannot testify against me? My God, Dr. Condon and your witnesses, did you ever realize what you did? In a short time I will stand before a higher judge and you will live a little longer, but you and you never can leave this world with a happier feeling as I do.

"Gentlemen from the prosecution where are all the direct evidence? Fingerprints, footprints, you all know there are some in existence? Oh Yes! For what did the police take right by my arrest all my shoes? Why all them special fingerprints from part of the band from where the usual never take?

Ransom Cash

"Why was it said to the jury I had $49,984 dollars of Lindbergh's money? You know it was not true, or half hour after my conviction your self send an officer to me that I should say where are the other $30,000 dollars. Why did you say to the jury that people saw gold bills in our house, but never brought this people on the witness stand? For what did you through all this same in the eyes of the jury, them two persons whom are judging offer my life?

"Who is responsible for building up all the circumstantial evidence? Is there really a man who can believe that I, a carpenter, should have built such a ladder?

"I stated that I found the money middle of August, 1934, and that I past the money without knowing it was Lindbergh money. Is there any person who can say that I past one single bill before that date?

"Why did my chief lawyer send important witnesses home without even bringing them on the stand? My God, my God, I hardly can't believe on all that what happened by my trial. But it was necessary to convict me and so close the books on the case.

"Mr. Wilentz, with my dying breath, I swear by God, that you convicted an innocent man. Once you will stand before the same judge to whom I go in a few hours. You know you have done wrong on me, you will not only take my life, but also all the happiness of my family. God will be judge between me and you.

"I beg you, Attorney-General, believe at least a dying man. Please investigate, because this case is not solvet, it only adds another dead to the Lindbergh case.

"Your Excellence, I see this as my duty, before this State takes my life, to thank you for what you have done for me. I write this with tears in my eyes. If ever prayer will reach you they will come from me, from my dear wife and my little boy.

"In all your effort to save my life and see that justice is done, I assure Your Excellence, that your effort was spent to an innocent man.

"I thank you, Excellence, from the bottom of my heart.

"And may God bless you,

"Respectfully,

"RICHARD BRUNO HAUPTMANN."

"Why was not any consideration given to my four witnesses whom saw me in the same hour between 8-9 in the bakery in New York?" On the 1st of March, 1932? There were no friends of mine. There are all strangers to me. Even one of them came in very bad condition from the sick bed. No witness from the State came up at all to cover this particular period, to place me in New Jersey."

Bruno Hears, Then Sleeps

Trenton, N. J., April 1 (AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann slept the sleep of exhaustion today, making up for the rest he could not get the night before last on the eve of his scheduled execution.

In sharp contrast to Monday night, when the condemned man paced his cell through the long hours of the night, prison officials said he went to sleep last night soon after C. Lloyd Fisher, his attorney, told him of the delay in execution.

He moved only once or twice, his guards reported, and was still asleep at 10 o'clock.

WENDEL JURY WILL RESUME DELIBERATIONS TOMORROW

permit Hauptmann's execution until after Wendel's trial, our informant said. The trial would not be called for several months.

However, the chances for indictment of Wendel, on the basis of testimony by Burlington County Chief of Detectives Ellis Parker and a repudiated "confession" he obtained, went glimmering when the grand jury went home at 1:05 a. m. today without taking action, a person close to the Hauptmann defense declared.

Waiting anxiously outside the county courthouse after midnight, this defense aid said:

"If they return an indictment against Wendel before they come out this morning, he, Hauptmann, will be saved. But if they take an adjournment without action I don't think there ever will be any indictment against Wendel. That will mean curtains for Hauptmann."

Jurors Leave for Homes

A short while later, the weary grand jurors, who had been in session for nearly 12 hours, left for their homes. They had not acted. The defense aide shrugged wearily.

"That's that," he said. "It looks bad for Hauptmann now."

The action of the amazing grand jury has provided one of the most bizarre and unexpected chapters of the entire Hauptmann case.

It surprisingly started to act on the murder charge against Wendel yesterday afternoon, after County Prosecutor Erwin Marshall had announced he would not place the case before the jury and after Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard had contemptuously dismissed the purported "confession" as "incredible."

One of the first acts of the jury was to exclude Prosecutor Marshall from its deliberations. It then called as the first witness Parker and his son, Ellis Parker, Jr.

Preparations were going on all the while at the state prison for the execution of Hauptmann at 8 p. m. There appeared no hope for him. The governor had promised not to reprieve him again. A last minute plea by defense lawyers for a judicial stay from Justice Trenchard was bluntly refused.

Then, like a bolt from the blue, Col. Mark O. Kimberling, warden of the State prison, sent a message to the jury early in the evening asking the jury to notify him if they "succeeded in getting any new developments." The inference was plain. It meant there was a glimmer of hope for Hauptmann from an undreamed of source.

SAVED BY MINUTES

Time sped on. It was only five minutes before time for Hauptmann to start his death march. Then Foreman Allyne Freeman, a Trenton business man and a friend of Governor Hoffman's, telephoned Kimberling. He said the Grand Jury requested him to postpone the execution for 48 hours.

"There are some interesting new angles in the case we wish to investigate," Freeman explained.

Kimberling promptly ordered the requested 48-hour postponement.

ALREADY ON BROW

Melodramatic? The highest-paid scenario writer could not have outdone it!

When that stay was issued the death sweat was already on Hauptmann's brow.

He was muttering prayers in the death house with his two pastors, the Rev. John Matthiesen of Trenton and the Rev. D. G. Werner of New York.

A milling mob of 10,000 waited outside the prison walls, momentarily expecting the report that Bruno had died at last.

It was a smashing climax to a day of melodramatic events. Two hours earlier Governor Hoffman astounded everybody by granting a 30-day reprieve to Charles Zied, a friendless Philadelphia gangster, "forgotten man" of the death house, who was to have preceded Hauptmann to the chair.

Still earlier C. Lloyd Fisher and Frederick A. Pope, of defense counsel, had argued desperately but vainly before Justice Trenchard for a stay of execution of Hauptmann's sentence until the Wendel charges could be cleared up.

CLAIMS TORTURE

They were opposed by Attorney-General Wilentz, who charged that Wendel had been tortured into "confessing" and called the charges against him the "foulest, vilest kind of an attempt to thwart justice."

Parker, outside the grand jury room, answered Wilentz's charges with a characteristic outburst of salty invective. He said:

"He who laughs last laughs best.

"They said I was wrong before, didn't they? And I showed 'em, too. Well, I'm here—I ain't running away.

"There ain't a loophole in the whole confession. I know, because I checked it. Why don't they have 'Jafsie' down here to look over Wendel?"

He subsided then, morosely sucking at a blackened pipe while waiting to enter the grand jury room.

Before the grand jury adjourned they grilled the son and daughter of Wendel, Paul Wendel, Jr., and Mrs. Dorothy Wendel Phillips. The ordeal was so severe for the young woman that she fainted and had to be carried out of the courthouse.

There were no other witnesses before the jury, though others waited to be called. One of these was Tito Salamandra, who, it was learned, will be asked if he loaned a green sedan to Wendel on the night of the kidnaping, March 1, 1932.

DENIES QUIZZING

Rumors were persistently circulated that Salamandra had been questioned, but the man denied it himself. All he would say to reporters was:

"I have just been waiting so far. Mr. Wendel is a fine man."

Salamandra will be examined later, it was learned.

The "renewed investigation" of the Lindbergh crime, which had come to almost a full stop yesterday morning, was fully under way again today as a result of the grand jury's action.

Lieutenant Robert W. Hicks, one of the governor's investigators, left on a mysterious mission in connection with the Wendel case "somewhere in the northern part of the state." He said he was dispatching three of his men to other parts of the state on investigations.

Services of the Department of Justice at Washington were asked in checking the alleged fingerprints against the smudges on the kidnap ladder.

The case has become so bewildering that few would hazard a guess as to whether Hauptmann will die this week. If he is executed, it is believed it will be on Friday night.

TAKES SOUR VIEW

Strangely, the usually optimistic Hicks took a sour view of Hauptmann's prospects.

"I think he will go this week," he said, "though it will mean political suicide for the governor if he does. Frankly, I don't think much of this Wendel angle. It's not true because it is Ellis Parker's angle, instead of mine; it's because I just don't believe the man committed the crime."

Little could be learned of what Parker told the jury during the two hours he was in the grand jury house, however, it was disclosed by an official that the grizzled sleuth had told the jury things that he has told no one else—not even the governor—and had placed Wendel's original, 25-page confession before the jurors.

Neither the governor, nor the attorney-general, has a copy of this original confession. All they have are typewritten copies of questions and answers between Parker and Wendel.

WARDEN SHOWS UP

The town has more newspaper representatives and newsreel representatives here than at any time ever seen at one time before. It also has a large population of cranks and curiosity seekers that pop up whenever this case appears to be nearing a climax. The principal hotels are filled and turned away hundreds.

The scene at the jail last night almost beggared description.

By 7:30 p. m. the warden's office and the room adjoining was thronged. Thirty newspaper men, six doctors, three police officials, two ministers, the clerk of the board of pardons, Robert Elliott, the executioner; Hicks, the detective; an electrician, Deputy Keeper George L. Selby, Warden Mark O. Kimberling and six guards—all were there.

At 7:48 p. m. Warden Kimberling showed up. He said Hauptmann was talking with the Rev. D. G. Werner, receiving spiritual consolation.

"Did Hauptmann leave any letters for his wife?" he was asked.

"No," said Kimberling, quietly.

"Have any arrangements been made for disposition of his body?"

"No," said the warden.

Time was moving on. Slowly, it seemed very slowly.

The waiting witnesses-to-be were constantly consulting their watches.

When the hands of the clock showed two minutes to eight everybody began to wonder why the Lutherites had not moved to the death chamber.

Eight o'clock—the zero hour—came and passed. A few minutes after eight a clerk emerged from Kimberling's office and said something about a possible reprieve."

READS ANNOUNCEMENT

At 8:05 p. m. Kimberling emerged from his office, a slip of paper in his hand. He read a typewritten announcement which in effect said he had received a telephone message from Allyne Freeman, foreman of the Mercer County grand jury, informing Kimberling to hold off the execution for 48 hours because "there are some interesting new angles in the case the grand jury wished to investigate."

"Does this mean Hauptmann will be executed Thursday night?" Kimberling was asked.

"I am setting no date at this time," replied Kimberling.

The death sentence had been set for "the week of March 30" and Colonel Kimberling, under the law, could execute it any day this week without a court order.

Reporters dashed from the prison, racing pell mell down the street to the "pinch house," where, on emergency wires, they flashed the story to the world.

The news quickly spread to the crowd in the streets back of the roped-off "dead line." But the mob refused to believe the news and did not disperse until newspaper "extras" appeared.

FISHER JUBILANT

Lloyd Fisher was jubilant. He described Hauptmann's reaction to his remarkable experience.

"When I saw Hauptmann in the morning he showed evidence of grief and concern," said Fisher. "When I saw him later in the day he felt better.

"Virtually every effort to save Hauptmann had been exhausted and no one knew that better than he did.

"And then along about 6 p. m. came word that Governor Hoffman had granted a thirty-day reprieve to Charles Zied, the man who was to have preceded Hauptmann to the electric chair. Zied's good news had a stimulating effect on Hauptmann.

"I don't know how much you know about the death house. I hope to tell you I don't ever want to get so close to one again, but when good news comes, such as came for Zied, it lifts up all the prisoners.

The word that Zied had been reprieved spread through the prison like lightning. This Zied is supposed to be a gangster, but there is something about him I like.

THOUSAND DEATHS

"I'm dead set against capital punishment. It's barbaric. They die a thousand deaths.

"Some of you reporters say I'm abrupt about what Hauptmann says and that I do not dramatize it. But I can only tell you what Hauptmann says and acts and I can't dramatize something when it's not there.

"Hauptmann took the news calmly when I broke it to him. He seemed to have sensed it. As a matter of fact, I never saw Hauptmann break down. He was upset yesterday morning—that was all. The only time I ever saw him in tears was at Flemington when he reached his cell after he had been convicted."

The Rev. Matthiesen who, with Fisher, broke the good news to Hauptmann said:

"I went to bed from 5:30 p. m. to 6:30 p. m. because I knew that Hauptmann was having an hour of devotion with the Rev. D. G. Werner. When I came back to the prison at about 7:30 p. m. I saw newspaper men and the other witnesses in the warden's office. I stayed around there until about 8 p. m. because I knew the grand jury was in session.

"Then I heard of the stay of execution. I rushed down to Hauptmann's cell. Have you heard the good news?" I asked. He brightened up but didn't say anything for a moment or two. He was a pitiful figure, sitting there his head shaved and trousers leg slit, waiting to be taken to the death chamber. Finally he said: 'I am very glad—I hope this is the final sign of better things to come."

SUDDENLY LONELY

The Rev. Matthiesen said the reason Hauptmann broke down and wept yesterday morning when Colonel Kimberling went to see him was because he had been moved to a different cell in the death house—a cell that gave for a chair was empty.

"The picture of his wife and baby were in the other cell. He suddenly became very lonesome. Emotion overcame him. That, and that alone, made him break down."

Detective Hicks said he was the first to break the news to Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, the prisoner's wife, who was waiting fearfully in her room in a downtown hotel.

"She choked up and could hardly talk, she was so overjoyed," declared Hicks.

A lengthy statement written by Hauptmann to the Governor at a time when he thought he was soon to die was released by the Governor's office.

Hauptmann, in one part of the statement, wanted to know why Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, the Lindbergh intermediary in the $50,000 ransom payment, had hidden "so many things he knows?"

"My God, Dr. Condon and your witnesses, did you ever realize what you did?" asked Hauptmann. "In a short time I will stand before a higher judge and you will live a little longer. But you can never leave this world with a happier feeling as I do."

SWEARS INNOCENCE

Regarding Attorney-General David T. Wilentz, who once characterized Hauptmann as "Public Enemy Number One of the World," the condemned man said:

"Mr. Wilentz, with my dying breath, I swear by God, that you convicted an innocent man. Once you will stand before the same judge to whom I go in a few hours. You know you have done wrong on me, you will not only take my life but also all the happiness of my family. God will be judge between you and me."

Hauptmann thanked Governor Hoffmann, who has been interceding for him, adding:

"I write this with tears in my eyes. If ever prayer will reach you, they will come from me, from my dear wife and my little boy."

A strange night it was. A note of unreality in it all, such as has characterized the high moments in this Hauptmann drama, from the weird night when the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped to the night when Hauptmann was convicted in Flemington and along through the maze of queer circumstances until today when the case truly has become the "spectacle of the century."

TOWNSEND AIDE INDICTMENTS REVEALED

Washington, April 1 (INS)—Three indictments against Edward J. Margett, San Francisco area manager of the Townsend old age pension movement, were read into the evidence today of the congressional committee probing old age pension schemes.

Two of the indictments charged grand larceny.

A third charged Margett with accepting the earnings of a disorderly woman.

The indictments, James R. Sullivan, committee counsel, charged, covered alleged crimes in Seattle, Wash., in 1914 and 1915.

The indictments were admitted over vigorous and repeated objections by Rep. John H. Tolan (D.) of California, member of the Townsend congressional bloc.

$2600 A MONTH

Margett, testified Robert E. Clements, co-founder of the Townsend movement who resigned as secretary-treasurer last week, received $2600 in monthly commissions from the nickel and dime contributions of old folks in support of their belief that the Townsend movement will bring them $200 monthly pensions.

Complaints had been received by Clements that Margett also was "connected with a wholesale bootleg concern," Clements admitted. "But I couldn't find any record of a conviction," he added.

Clements said he tried to remove Margett but that Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the country doctor who originated the pension scheme, wouldn't let him.

MARGETT SUMMONED

Margett was ordered subpoenaed by Chairman Bell.

Clements insisted he found Margett's record in Old Age Revolving Pensions Ltd. "clean."

Sullivan then introduced the three indictments, and Rep. Tolan forced a roll call vote on their admission.

The vote was 4 to 3 foradmission. Reps. Tolan, Collins and Hoffman voted nay.

G-MEN HUNTING BANK BANDITS

Finger prints taken from the automobile of the Chelsea payroll holdup bandits, abandoned in Everett, were sent to the department of justice in Washington today by federal "G" men working on the case.

A check-up of the fingerprints with known payroll bandits was ordered.

Prepared to shoot to kill, "G" men circulated in several Boston "hot" spots today, watching for the suspects in the $16 138 Chelsea City Hall robbery.

Two suspects, taken into custody last night, were not identified by 12 witnesses today in a police line-up at Chelsea police station. They were released.

Boston police said today that the photographs of two of the bandits had been identified by a Chelsea city employe, a witness to the holdup. Police said he was a New York gunman, but withheld his name.

Patrolman John C. Martin who was struck down by a blunt instrument by one of the bandit mob is still at the Chelsea Memorial Hospital suffering from a brain concussion.

Flood Damaged Stamps Redeemed

The postoffice department said reports showed extensive damage to postmasters' stocks.

CONCRETE CAN TAKE IT

CONCRETE . . . COSTS LESS

THE cost of concrete pavement is less than that of any other of equal load-carrying capacity!

Strong, rigid concrete pavement distributes the load over a subgrade so no other pavement of comparable cost can do. As a result—concrete withstands the punishment of a rapid succession of big buses, high speed trucks and trailers through summer heat and winter cold. Concrete can take it! As Henry Ford has said—the modern concrete highway is "unbeatable."

The first cost of concrete is less than that of any other pavement of equal load-carrying capacity—upkeep is less—driving costs are less—comfort, visibility and safety are greater.

It was hinted that many loopholes, left by previous administrations, will be taken care of later.

Tears and Bullets

'I Didn't Mean to Kill,' Sobs Vera

New York, April 1 (INS)—Vera Stretz, cultured young blonde on trial for the murder November 12 of Dr. Fritz Gebhardt, her married suitor, denied again today she planned his death when she went to his room in the fashionable Beekman Towers Hotel.

Recalling her to the witness chair as her trial drewtoward a close, Samuel Leibowitz, her counsel, asked:

"Miss Stretz, did you intend to kill Dr. Gebhardt when you first picked up the gun in his room that night?"

"I did not," she replied in a low, firm tone.

"What did you intend to do?" asked Assistant District Attorney Miles O'Brien, "just frighten him?"

Leibowitz objected to the query and was sustained.

Detective John B. Kaiser, who handled the police investigation, denied he mistreated Miss Stretz when she was questioned after her arrest, and Ver was questioned concerning Kaiser's actions.

"He swore at me when I told him 'Please don't handle me,' after he had taken my hand and put his knees against mine," she declared.

Shaken apparently by having to return as a witness, Vera burst into tears, rocking back and forth.

She was admonished by the court that "such demonstrations at this time are uncalled for and must stop."

Leibowitz flared up again and moved for a mistrial when the court, referring to Vera's statement concerning Kaiser, asked if "your remory is any better than yesterday."

Yesterday Vera had testified she was so stunned at the time of her arrest she couldn't recall many incidents of that period. His motion was denied.

Vera, still weeping, was led from the witness chair and both the defense and prosecution closed their cases.

ATTACK VERA STORY

Leibowitz immediately made the usual motions to dismiss the indictments on the grounds the state had not proved deliberation and predemitation sufficient to justify a charge of first-degree murder.

He also moved to dismiss it on the grounds the State had not proved sufficient grounds for second-degree murder or first-degree manslaughter.

Justice Collins announced he would hear arguments on the motion to dismiss insofar as first degree murder was concerned and excused the jury until tomorrow afternoon.

Council will begin arguments tomorrow and the case may go to the jury Friday.

Soon after court convened today, the prosecution in rebuttal picked up where Leibowitz left off on the dramatic story of the killing.

Assistant District Attorney O'Brien asked on the witness chair Merton Robinson, a ballistics engineer for the Winchester Repeating Arms Company in New Haven, Conn.

Robinson was shown a box of cartridges found in Miss Stretz's bag when she was arrested.

The cartridges, Miss Stretz had testified were purchased by her brother "sometime in 1931."

Robinson, however, said he had checked the serial number and code mark on the cartridges and that they showed the box had not been loaded until Oct. 5, 1933.

WAS SACCO WITNESS

Cross-examined Leibowitz, Vera's counsel, seemingly was unimpressed by Robinson's testimony, and did not immediately interrogate him.

A few minutes later, however, Leibowitz recalled Robinson as a witness for the defense in sur-rebuttal.

Under Leibowitz's questioning, Robinson qualified as a ballistics and firearms expert. He had testified as such, he said, in "a great number of cases," including the Hall-Mills case, Sacco-Vanzetti case and the Don Mellet case in Toledo, O., among others.

Leibowitz then put a long, involved hypothetical question to Robinson, outlining the circumstances of the shooting as told by Vera. The point was whether the gun in the case held as Vera said she had held it would produce a wound such as Gebhardt received. O'Brien objected and was sustained as Judge Collins ruled the matter did not come into the field of expert testimony.

"The gun made such a wound," he said. "That's the point of this case."

VERA WEEPS OVER WOUNDS

Reading the description of Gebhardt's fatal wounds from the report of the medical examiner, Leibowitz then sought to demonstrate, with the aid of Robinson, that it would have been almost impossible to inflict one of the wounds had Gebhardt been prone—as the state charged. The defense has insisted at least one wound was inflicted as he lay in bed.

Vera claimed she shot him as he struggled with her.

Robinson said if the victim had been lying prone the gun would have had to be held almost vertically over him to inflict the wound.

Leibowitz's demonstration, involving a dozen hypothetical questions, was hampered by successful prosecution objections.

RUSSIANS ROUT JAPANESE IN MONGOLIA

taking place inside Manchoukuo and said poison gas was used.)

Informed sources claimed the danger of another Russo-Japanese war had grown to menacing proportions.

As yet there has been received no exact information as to the number of troops that participated in the action.

Dispatches from Ulan Bator (Urga), capital of Outer Mongolia, said the invasion was launched yesterday and immediately precipitated heavy fighting in the Far Eastern peoples' republic, newly allied to Russia under a mutual assistance pact.

Soon after the news of the conflict began to reach Moscow, B. S. Stomaniakoff, Soviet vice-commissar for foreign affairs, told Japanese Ambassador Tamekichi Ota that the situation did not permit "waiting pacifically for development of events."

The Soviet spokesman declared "serious responsibility" would fall on the shoulders of the Japanese government if the fighting in Outer Mongolia were allowed to continue.

ULTIMATUM TO JAPAN

The tide of battle swung back and forth about 30 miles within Mongol territory, Soviet advices said, the invaders occupying one Mongol border post and advancing on another before meeting stern resistance.

The Soviet vice-commissar, in a virtual ultimatum to Japan, demanded "energetic measures" to put to an immediate end the alleged Japanese attacks on outer Mongolia.

Stomaniakoff pointedly called Ambassador Ota's attention to the fact that the Soviet union, with its vast army of more than a million men, had pledged its aid to outer Mongolia, with a population of only 670,000, in the event that autonomous republic should become a victim of aggression.

Reiterating the Soviet's intention to protect Outer Mongolia in case of need, Stomaniakoff declared the Kremlin considered maintainance of peace on the Mongol frontier essential to peace on the entire Soviet-Manchoukuoan boundary.

Air Bombers, Poison Gas Used, Japan Charges

[illegible], 1936, by Associated Press.

Tokyo, April 1—The Japanese army command in Manchoukuo charged today that a squadron of 12 Outer Mongolian airplanes heavily bombarded a frontier guard with Manchoukuoan territory.

A communique issued by the Japanese general headquarters at Hsinking, capital of Manchoukuo, asserted both the air raid and a later ground clash occurred "about 20 kilometers (12.5 miles) north of Tawlan," inside the Manchoukuoan frontier.

Both sides were reported to have suffered heavy losses in the clash in the disputed sector between the Japanese-sponsored state of Manchoukuo and the Soviet-supported republic of Outer Mongolia, but the outcome of the conflict was not disclosed.

INDIGNATION AROUSED

A Domei (Japanese) News Agency dispatch from Hsinking implied that the Mongols used poison gas in the encounter.

"The Manchukuo foreign office is extremely indignant at the Outer Mongolian air force's bombing of Japanese-Manchoukuoan forces March 29 and March 31, and also the activities of Outer Mongolian chemical warfare units," the dispatch said. "Considering these developments a serious menace to the peace of the Far East and detrimental to the relations between Manchukuo and Mongolia, the Manchoukuo foreign office is preparing a strong protest to Outer Mongolia after detailed reports are available."

At the same time, both the war office and foreign office said they were entirely ignorant of a reported invasion of Outer Mongolia by Japanese-Manchoukuoan forces, charged in Soviet advices from Ulan Bator (Urga), capital of Outer Mongolia.

The Japanese people—whose soldiers, if the Ulan Bator accounts were accurate, were engaged in a large-scale invasion, carrying danger of war to the world's largest military power, Soviet Russia—were entirely ignorant of the movement.

Vernacular newspapers, obeying a press ban against publishing anything concerning the Manchu-Mongolian frontier troubles except Tokyo and Hsinking communiques, did not mention the reported expedition into Outer Mongolia.

Hundreds Delayed When Giant Derrick Topples

This derrick fell across trolley wires at Huntington avenue and Jamaicaway, forcing workmen to cut wires to let it down. Hundreds of passengers on Huntington avenue Boston Elevated lines were delayed. The end of the derrick arm may be seen resting against the half-constructed overpass of Route 1. No evidence of earlier trafic jam appears in picture, since autos were rerouted.

Derrick Topples, Ties Up 'L' Lines

Hundreds of passengers were delayed, and service along the Huntington avenue Boston Elevated lines at Jamaicaway was disrupted today when a derrick, working on the overpass construction, fell across the trolley wires.

Elevated wrecking crews labored without result to right the giant derrick, and finally the trolley wires were cut, and the derrick was allowed to fall to the street.

Meanwhile, trolley cars in-bound from Brookline Village and Allston, were halted at the Village station, and passengers walked to South Huntington avenue, where they resumed their journey.

HAILE ROUTED, 7000 KILLED

With Italian Forces on Northern Front, April 1 (INS)—Emperor Haile Selassie and an army he was commanding personally were completely routed by the Italian First Army Corps today in a battle believed by Italian officers to be the decisive engagement of the entire East African campaign.

Field Marshal Badoglio announced 7000 Ethiopians were killed and that the Italian forces had suffered more than 1000 casualties.

London, April 1 (INS)—Reuter's News Agency reported rumors in Rome today that Emperor Haile Selassie had contacted the Italian command with a view to preliminaries for negotiations to end the Italo-Ethiopian war.

NAZIS SUBMIT 27 POINTS ON RHINE PEACE

Berlin, April 1—Adolf Hitler, in a memorandum to British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, proposed today negotiations covering a period of four months for what might be termed a new Locarno, replacing the pact broken by Germany.

During these negotiations, Der Fuehrer suggested, Germany, France and Belgium should accept control of their frontiers by a commission of one representative each from Great Britain, Italy and one neutral power.

Both sides should refrain from casting aspersions on each other, either in publications, public utterances or teachings.

A plebiscite of the three peoples involved was proposed by Hitler to give solemn sanction to the work of the statesmen, once the negotiations were concluded successfully.

These negotiations, with neither side to increase its military forces along the border zone, would be followed by a general conference for limitation of armaments.

Twenty-seven points constituted Hitler's reply to the original plan by the other Locarno powers for settlement of the crisis by creation of a new demilitarized zone in Germany, submission of the dispute over the Franco-Soviet pact to the world court and calling of a great international conference.

The memorandum called for a general conference for limitation of armaments.

It charged that France began with violation of the 14 points of Woodrow Wilson which constituted the basis for Germany's acceptance of the World War armistice.

Der Fuehrer ruled that the proposed new Locarno negotiations must take place in three phases:

1—Agreement on the procedure for the negotiations.

2—The negotiations themselves for the new Locarno.

3—A solution of questions not of immediate urgency—for instance, economic questions—which must be solved in due time.

DEATH FINE PROBED

R. I. Case Going to Grand Jury

Providence, April 1—Attorney General John P. Hartigan said today facts in connection with the Warwick hit-and-run case, which brought the resignation of District Court Judge Patrick F. Barry, will be presented to the May term of the grand jury.

The case involves the death of Robert Eli Moulton, 11-year-old Warwick Boy Scout, on November 15.

Last week, after pleading nolo in Fourth District Court at Warwick to a charge of leaving the scene of a fatal accident, Merrill S. Sisson, 41, of Warwick, was fined $10 and costs.

This disposition of the case aroused such a furore that Judge Barry resigned. He made a statement afterward in which he said that the case had been so presented by City Solicitor Joseph W. Grimes and a representative of the Warwick police as to cause him to show leniency.

Subsequently, Mayor John A. O'Brien of Warwick said he had demanded Grimes' resignation. This was denied by Grimes, who added he would not resign anyway.

The case's disposition also resulted in a bill being filed in the General Assembly designed to give the Warwick mayor more power to remove the police chief for cause. The present chief is Henry J. Ledoux.

The case's disposition also re-

Charlotte Cushman Club Entertains At Enjoyable Supper Dance

By BETTY ALDEN

LIKE ALL CUSHMAN CLUB parties, the theatrical supper dance at the Towne Club last evening was a very lively and enjoyable affair . . .

Practically everybody who attended came on in groups from a number of different dinner parties and as soon as they arrived, everyone from the most dignified of dowagers to the peppiest of debutantes, joined into the informal spirit of the evening . . .

MRS. GEORGE CUTTS VAUGHAN

A number of theatrical luminaries who are now appearing behind the footlights on local stages were invited to be the guests of honor and much to the delight of the dancers, most of them reciprocated by giving short, impromptu entertainments . . .

Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French, president of the Cushman Club, welcomed all the guests with a cheery greeting and was looking her best in a white gown of heavy crepe with a long panel from the back of her decolletage forming a sweeping train . . . Her corsage was of purple orchids . . .

Assisting Mrs. French in welcoming the theatrical stars at the head table was Mrs. William A. Gaston, whose lovely white hair was enhanced by a gown of fragile black lace . . .

Now that the weather is warmer, people are beginning to think more of outdoor sports and riding, so it might be considered significant that the North Shore sporting crowd turned out last evening, almost in a body, to bid adieu to the social season in town, before turning their eyes toward sailing, tennis and riding . . .

The Morgan Harrises and the junior James C. Grays, who spend most of the summer season tacking and scudding across the waters of Marblehead bay, attended with groups of friends . . . For one who is such a good outdoor sport, Mrs. Gray looked very tiny and feminine in a pert black taffeta frock with brilliant buttons and a gardenia corsage . . .

Another couple who are looking forward to getting into slacks and oilskins for the sailing season are Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hovey, who spent their honeymoon last summer behind the mast, cruising European waters . . . Last evening they were very formal and dressy as they chatted with their cousins, the Morgan Harrises . . . Mr. and Mrs. B. Devereaux Barker, Jr., who are also prominent in social and sporting affairs at Marblehead, were in their party . . .

* * *

Wears Gown of Violet Satin

TWO RECENTLY MARRIED couples attended together . . . Mr. and Mrs. C. Davis Hodges, Jr. (Betty Dwinnell) and Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Miller (Margot Emerson) . . . Mrs. Miller wore a lovely gown of violet satin with draped panniers and Mrs. Hodges accentuated her blondeness with a frock of Alice blue crepe with a wide belt of delphinium blue to match her purse . . .

There always seems to be a romantic air about the Towne Club so it was not surprising to find Charlotte Sherburne and her brand new fiance among the dancers . . . Vivid tulips ran riot in Charlotte's flowered print with long drapes of dull blue satin falling from each shoulder to the hemline in back . . .

Mrs. John Douglas Little (Janice Vaughan) clung to the arm of Crocker Snow as they made their way through the crowd to find her sister-in-law, Mrs. George Cutts Vaughan and the rest of their party . . . Mrs. Little, who has been in our midst all winter, after several seasons in London, wore another of her snappy outfits . . . this one of black taffeta, very low cut bodice and full skirt, and dotted with bright green circles . . .

Flowers seemed to play a large part in the ladies' ensembles . . . Mrs. Nathaniel Emmons affected something new in the line of corsages with a large spray of carnations, shading from coral to wine red, pinned on her ermine wrap . . . and Mrs. Lawrence Black's gardenias not only blossomed on the shoulder of her print gown, but in a coronet completely around her head.

* * *

Martha Bird in Turquoise Frock

MARTHA BIRD AND DAVE SCANNELL had a little game of hide-and-go-seek with the photographers . . . why, we cannot imagine, for Martha's turquoise frock was very becoming and pretty with her reddish gold hair . . . Polly Long was escorted by Gordon McKissock . . . and Bob Hood was carrying Sally Scudder's compact and wrap . . . Janet Marston was with Blair Lamont . . .

Twin prints of navy and white were combined most effectively in Mrs. George Stewart Sander's frock and tailored jacket . . .

We take Charles Vallendar's word for it that Evie Weatherby's vivid print is called "fleur de vie" . . . and share his opinion that it was very becoming . . .

Pale green satin fashioned the frock of Mrs. William Ellison who seemed very petite as she danced with several tall partners . . . Still others we noticed were Mr. and Mrs. Basil Gavin, the latter in sheer black lace . . . Mimi Little in pale green shot with gold to match the filet of gold flowers in her hair . . . Jane Matthews in a black and printed taffeta, in a foursome with Betty Prescott . . . Countess Electra Rosanska, Mrs. Paul D. Rust, Anne Petersen, Mr. and Mrs. Delcivere King, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tower, Paul Bird, Tom Bittenbender, Tom Knowles, Don Skinner and Joan Sagendorph . . .

Fashion Luncheon Held At the Lafayette

March may go out like a lamb in most places, but for the social world it usually makes its exit in a series of fashion shows. Yesterday, the windy month was ushered out with a fashion luncheon at the Lafayette.

A number of debs and post-debs acted as mannequins, wearing the latest spring models, as they paraded among the luncheon tables.

Post-deb Dorothy Knowles led the parade, wearing one of the latest novelty outfits. A navy blue "baby" dress embroidered with an organdie bib, and a very attractive off-the-face hat of the same color.

Sally Scudder, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Scudder, modeled a modish navy blue wool suit with a short snappy jacket lined with a flowered print to match the print blouse. Her hat was a navy Breton sailor piped with crimson to match the print.

Miss Louise English, another of this season's debutantes, displayed a cocoa brown tweed suit, a wide-brimmed felt hat and a sable stole.

Miss Jane Sexton wore another of the novel costumes which the fashion dictators say will be popular this Spring. A navy crepe dress with Gibson girl sleeves over an emerald taffeta petticoat, matching the emerald taffeta pom-pom on top of the navy blue turban.

Miss Rosamond Lockwood and Miss Edith Parker, the Junior League and Vincent Club theatrical and music writing collaborators were at one of the luncheon tables. Miss Lockwood wore a silk suit of dark brown with an apple green blouse and an apple green bow on a brown hat. Miss Parker was at her best in a navy blue ensemble and a shiny straw hat.

Many Future Brides Are Honored

THE shower season is on in more ways than one. Mother Nature's are bringing forth the spring flowers . . . the artificial variety are feting the season's brides.

Mrs. Wilbur Whitty of Brookline was hostess at a recent tea and shower in honor of Ruth Fessler of Dorchester who becomes the bride of Francis J. Turnbull of Roxbury at a 10 o'clock ceremony the morning of April 18.

Presiding at the tea urn were the future groom's two sisters, Esther and Mary Turnbull. Attending the informal party were Mrs. Francis Fowler, Mrs. Henry Elliot Foley, Maura Gallagher, Marguerite Sullivan, Jean York and Mrs. Joseph Leary.

The wedding takes place at St. Peter's Church in Dorchester and will be performed by Rev. John A. York.

Mrs. Wilbur Whitty of Brookline will be the bride's matron of honor and preceding the bride afterward will be Mrs. Francis Fowler, Mary Cohan, Lillian Gorman and Esther Turnbull.

Serving as the groom's best man will be Harold Hayden. Ushers will include Dr. Francis McMurray of Fitchburg, Joseph Hayden of Milton, Henry Elliot Foley of Hyde Park, Edward Maloney of Chicago, Joseph Leary of Milton, Charles Kelly of Fitchburg and James Gookin of Dorchester.

Following the ceremony a reception to the bridal pair will be held at the Longwood Towers.

Miss Fessler, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Fessler of Dorchester, attended Girls' High School and Boston Teachers' College.

Mr. Turnbull was graduated from Boston College and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is the son of John Turnbull of Roxbury.

Mary Meagher Honored

Last Sunday afternoon, Mary Meagher of Rutland Square was honored at a buffet supper when Mrs. Harry Gaffney of Newton Highlands gave at her home in Newton Highlands.

Pourers at the pre-nuptial affair were Louise McDonald of Newton and Mrs. Joseph Leary of Milton.

Miss Meagher becomes the bride of Harry Nugent of West Roxbury April 24.

The bride-elect was graduated from the Boston Academy of Notre Dame and New England Conservatory of Music. She is well-known in musical circles as a talented vocalist.

Grace Sweeney Announces Betrothal

At a tea at their home in Dorchester, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sweeney made known the engagement of their daughter, Grace, to Charles Duffy, Jr., of Dorchester.

Tea tables were in charge of Mrs. Frank Sweeney of Newton, and Beatrice Duffy of Dorchester. Extending best wishes to the bride-elect were Mrs. Charles Duffy, Dorothy and Marion Meloy, Mrs. Frances Mutrie, Mrs. Charles Boyden, Mrs. Frank Morton, Miriam O'Shean, Mrs. Thomas Cavanaugh and Mrs. Richard Nolan.

Others attending the betrothal tea were Mrs. Thomas Campbell, Loretta Burns, Mary Murray and Mrs. Frank Morrissey.

Grace was graduated from Girls' Latin School and Boston Teachers' College. Mr. Duffy, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duffy of Dorchester, attended Boston College High School and Boston College.

Anne Collins Guest of Honor

Another affair honoring the season's brides-elect is the dinner dance this evening at the Cocoanut Grove. Anne Collins of Roxbury will be guest of honor. She joins bridal ranks at a morning ceremony on June 17 when she becomes Mrs. Bernard Casey of Roxbury.

Miss Collins is prominent in amateur dramatics, having taken one of the leading roles in "Pilate's Daughter" for the last four seasons.

Twenty members of the cast of the Lenten drama will attend the party. Hostesses for the evening will be Helen Teehan and Mary McCarron.

The tale of two cobblers who booked passage on the Mayflower

A modern shoe factory

In 1629 the Mayflower on her second voyage brought two welcome newcomers to New England. Thomas Beard and Isaac Rickerman, bearing a letter of recommendation to Governor Winthrop, were the first shoemakers to ply their trade in America. They were promptly provided with board and lodging and free grants of land in Salem and set to work.

The tapping of their hammers echoes today in the whir and hum of machines in the great American industry they founded.

In 1935 there were produced in the United States 383,761,499 pairs of shoes, a record for all time. In that year, New England factories manufactured 132,890,000 pairs, more than 34% of the total.

For 152 years this bank has been identified with New England shoemaking. It counts as valued customers the foremost concerns in every division of the industry. Through our branch in Buenos Aires are financed vast shipments of hides which move unceasingly north through the port of Boston to nearby tanneries.

With Massachusetts still leading all states in numbers of shoe factories and tanneries, and an annual New England boot and shoe product valued at $193,913,525,* there is just cause hereabouts to salute the memory of Thomas Beard and Isaac Rickerman.

The 'Black-Guard' Committee

ANOTHER SENATOR ATTACKS PRESS

Schwellenbach's Venom Fails to Defend "Polecat" Acts

Washington, April 1—Another one of the "polecat committee's" members indulged in a typical "black-guard" speech on the floor of the Senate yesterday.

It was Senator Schwellenbach of the State of Washington, industrious lick-spittle of the New Deal's servile majority, who essayed the task of defending the "polecat committee" against the denunciations which have been pouring into Washington from every section of the country.

He could not deny the "black-guardly" conduct of his committee, nor that it had pried into the private and personal matters of the citizen by the seizure indiscriminately of private telegrams.

Nor could he deny tha the committee had invaded the constitutional rights of American citizens and trampled upon he constitutional guarantees intended to protect the people from such outrages.

Therefore he did the only thing which would suggest itself to a member of a "black-guard committee" by launching a black-guard attack upon the committee's critics, the courts, the law, the constitution and, incidentally upon Mr. William Randolph Hearst, who has committed the unforgiveable offense, in the eyes of a "polecat committee," of invoking the court's protection against a marauding and lawless Senate committee.

HIS DISLIKES

The speaker seemed particularly incensed with "the press of the nation" for its criticism of the "Raw Deal."

He didn't like the use by the newspapers of reprints of the American flag.

He didn't like Elisha Hanson, attorney for the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, who is also counsel in the court proceedings instituted by Mr. Hearst in Washington to restrain the "Black-Guard committee" from nullifying the bill of rights.

Evidently conscious of a Senator's privilege to libel with impunity, he scooped up a lot of old calumnies that had been used against Mr. Hearst by scoundrels whom he had exposed through his newspapers and by public enemies whom he had at various times denounced and scourged into hiding and mixing his filth with false inventions sought to lay down just the kind of a barrage which appeals to a "polecat committee."

WELL-WORN TIRADE

This tirade was delivered in the Senate at the very time when the "polecat committee's lawless conduct was being reviewed in a Washington courtroom, in terms that were temperate and restrained, but deadly.

In the District of Columbia Supreme Court counsel representing Mr. Hearst in the proceeding to quash the "black-guard committee's" abuses of power were calling, stating the deep and fundamental issues involved in Mr. Hearst's pitition for an injunction against thes eizure and publication of his private messages.

Mr. Hanson said:

"hTe issue in his case is whether the committee can commit acts which the Constitution forbids and reserves to itself the sole power to pass upon the lawfulness of its own act."

The counsel continued:

"The committe has no such power. The courts can restrain it from attempts to exercise such a power. Neither the Senate nor any committee of the Senate can set themselves up as the sole judges of their acts."

MOMENTOUS ISSUE

This is the momentous issue raised by Mr. Hearst and which the "black-guard committee" could only meet with the cheap Billingsgate and slanderous slush of the Schwellenbach speech.

In the statement made before the court it was brought out clearly that the attempted domination of the judicial department by either body of the legislative branch of the government or a committee of either the Senate or House would set up at once a congressional dictatorship from which the citizen could have no relief and against which he would have no protection.

The dependence of the citizen for the preservation of his liberties is in the power of the court to restrain their abuse or disregard, counsel maintained, and the only weapon of defense which the citizen has is the power of the court to enjoin illegal acts, no matter by whom attempted.

COMMUNIST CRY

Schwellenbach has apparently adopted the Communist cry that Mr. Hearst's defense of the Constitution makes him the leader of the movement towards Fascism, as if there were common ground between the United States Constitution and the principles of Fascism, or if anyone who reads at all could be ignorant of the vigorous and consistent warnings uttered by the Hearst papers day in and day out against the Fascist peril.

The befuddled Schwellenbach apparently thinks Mr. Hearst is spending too much on one of his California residences. If the preposterous sum which he mentioned were true probably the first to agree with him would be Mr. Hearst.

He also devoted a considerable portion of his lumbering tirade to the payrolls of the Hearst newspapers although the fact is known throughout the newspaper fraternity that the Hearst scale of pay is probably the most liberal in the newspaper world.

The lunging "black-guard" committeeman did not indicate just what bearing this portion of his speech had upon his committee's violation of the first, fourth and fifth amendments of the constitution, nor just what justification they afforded for the pillaging of personal files and seizure of private communications.

The speech was received with a mixed demonstration in the Senate.

The general sentiment seemed to be that Senator Schwellenback had made a bad case distinctly worse and many expressions were heard that the "black-guard committee" had done abobut enough damage, not only to the reputation of the Senate, but to the raw deal administration.

Some asserted it was high time the extinguisher was applied to senatorial snoopers of the black, Minton and Schwellenbach type.

One New Spinal Case in Boston

One new case of spinal meningitis was reported to Boston health authorities today. John J. Viles, 47, of Mendelsohn street, Roslindale, is in City Hospital suffering from the dread disease. His name is on the danger list.

Viles was taken to the hospital last night. His illness was diagnosed as meningitis and he was moved to the South department.

PALMER HAILS LANDON AS U. S. LEADER

New York, April 1 (INS)—"The presidency for the next four years will be involved with the greatest issue since the Civil War. In the Civil War, the issue was the survival of the nation undivided. In the coming campaign, the issue will be whether the American system shall survive."

It is Governor Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, speaking. The quotes are from the book "This Man Landon," by Frederick Palmer, noted biographer, being brought out today by Dodd, Mead and Company.

Lauding the famous Kansan's economic and administrative ideas, Palmer predicts that if Landon is elected President next November the nation will lose its Washington sideshow of presidential battles with Congress and that the executive branch of government will keep within its bounds and work through counsel instead of "making Congress a public whipping post."

"There would be less tendency than we have had in some administrations to posture the President as an embattled knight, scoring off the Congress," he writes, "less noise, but more accomplished."

Palmer asserts that Landon's splendid record at the administrative helm in his own state, with its cash basis law and balanced budget, is an indication of what he would do as President.

"The example of his success in dealing with the state legislature would apply in dealing with the national legislature, both being composed of human beings," Palmer writes. "His attitude would carry respect for the law-making power as such, and is personified in its members. His methods would be inductive instead of pedagogic."

Curb Senator Black, Washington Post Says

(Reprinted from the Sunday, March 29, issue of the Washington Post.)

MR. BLACK EVADES THE ISSUE

Charges against Senator Black's lobby investigating committee have reached a point where a full and candid explanation is imperative.

Its chairman has, on several occasions, defended the conduct of his committee by superfluous explanations of the Senate's procedure in the practice of subpoena.

No one is likely to question the historical accuracy of his statements. But the point at which his argument breaks down is where the Senator tries to show that his committee has only followed traditional custom. For, while reading a large number of subpoenas to telegraph companies in ostensibly similar cases, HE HAS PERSISTENTLY REFUSED TO PLACE THE SUBPOENAS USED BY HIS OWN COMMITTEE INTO THE RECORD.

Furthermore, the report of the Federal Communications Commission shows that copies of various telegrams were turned over to the Black Committee by the commission's employes.

That fact certainly tends to substantiate the charge of Senator Steiwer that "the messages demanded by the subpoenas were not produced in accordance with the order of the subpoenas."

Indeed, the indication is that the copies of telegrams were not obtained by subpoena procedure at all.

The Senate committee is now specifically charged with gaining access to all programs sent from or received by the Washington offices for a period of several months by the underhanded method of "working with" the governmental agency which regulates telegraphic communications.

Obviously there is no connection between such procedure and the subpoenas issued in past investigations.

The real issue is whether any legislative group should be permitted to spy upon private messages by utilizing an executive agency whose authority extends only to the regulation of communications.

Of nearly equal importance is the question as to whether any congressional committee should be sustained at the issuance of blanket subpoenas so broad as to require the examination of vast numbers of private telegrams having NO RELATIONSHIP WHATEVER TO THE PURPOSE OF THE INQUIRY.

Senator Black has consistently refused to meet these issues.

Instead of replying to the valid criticism directed at his committee, he has tried to divert the Senate into technical discussion of subpoenas, and to impugn the sincerity of his critic by cheap and unsubstantiated reflections on the integrity of all who object on principle to casuistic methods.

The fact that the Civil Liberties Union has denounced the conduct of the Black committee should be proof enough that this fight against unreasonable seizure of private messages is not a matter of interested groups trying to prevent investigations "that expose corruption."

Illegal spying into private affairs is so repugnant to the spirit of democracy that no practices of this sort can be permitted to pass unchallenged.

Luxury Model

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER IX

Several well-known artists will assist Mr. Adolphe Quackenbush, famous stylist and couturier of Fifth avenue, to select six representatives of American beauty who will be offered positions as mannequins in the House of Quackenbush.

No girl is eligible to complete who is of foreign nationality or who has ever modelled professionally.

Below this were the names of the artists. Also the information that the weeding out of competitors was taking place every afternoon between the hours of 2 and 5, at an address on Madison avenue, with a committee of society women acting as judges.

On Wednesday there would be a final sifting down to the fortunate 40 who would model the gowns and wraps at the big show.

Elizabeth caught her breath. Perhaps here was her chance?

Would she be inordinately conceited to try?

"I'll have a sporting shot at it," she murmured, tearing off the annnouncement, folding it and putting it in her handbag.

Independence was the only thing in the world she wanted now. By hard work the past might be thrust into the background, though it would always be there.

She dreaded the meeting with Aunt Minnie. It would tie her to that past, be an ever-present link with her old life.

If there were no Aunt Minnie waiting for her, she could change her name, start a fresh page.

The train ran into Grand Central station. A flock of red caps appeared.

"I'll carry my own," she said firmly to an impotune porter who attempted to seize her suitcase as she followed the crowd up the passage.

Once through the barrier, she saw Aunt Minnie, blinking shortsightedly about.

With an impulse that was a wild bid for freedom, Elizabeth let herself be swept with the crowd beyond the dumpy form of Aunt Minnie, out to the waiting ranks of taxicabs.

In the cheap hotel that had been recommended to her by the taxi-driver, Elizabeth registered in the name of Luana Waters.

She had burned her boats. There could be no turning back now.

But, remembering her stepfather's gruff kindness to her when he had come to her help in San Diego, she decided she would send him a night letter, so that he need not be more worried on her account than need be.

As for Aunt Minnie, she doubtless would be relieved to be rid of the "erring girl."

It was a sparkling blue-gold morning such as often comes to New England in early spring, with a salty tang of the sea in the air. Elizabeth was astonished to find herself so exhilarated. She had turned a new page. What would be written on it?

Principally hard work. Lots of it.

Here on the sixteenth floor, the noise of traffic in the streets rose like a hymn of battle. It was like some powerful giant striking on his anvil and jubilantly ringing to high heaven. There was a note of triumph in it, of boundless courage and achievement. She hearkened to this rhythm of the city. She was part of it.

Luana Waters that she now was would present herself today for the first lap of the beauty-cum-fashion contest in the appointed place on Madison avenue.

She bathed, and shampooed her hair. Then she went down to the hotel beauty parlor, had the hair finger-wave, and a facial, and a manicure, not because she felt she was any longer vain, but because beauty was the main essential for the coming battle.

* * *

"My dear, did you ever see such mobs of females?"

The speaker was a slim, sleek-haired, effeminate young man. He had a plaintive voice, with a pronounced foreign accent.

His companion of the opposite sex flicked the ash from the end of her cigarette into a fern tub that seemed the only likely receptacle in this crowded room. She smiled into his eyes and shrugged nonchalantly.

"But you wanted to come, my dear Ramon!"

"Only because you did."

Interested

Hearing this, Luana—incurable romanticist that she still was, despite her avowed intention to put romance behind her—was interested at once.

The woman was rather tall, and slight, with a kind of willowy gracefulness. She was beautifully dressed in black,—a shimmery, expensive black swathed with yards of silver fox fur. Her hair was Titian red, her skin milky. She had sleepy eyes of some indeterminate color. They glinted under heavy lids that were fringed with amazing long lashes.

Luana thought the woman's face was like some pale, exotic flower under the small black velvet hat that simply screamed Paris!

A faint, exquisite perfume emanated from her.

"She's stunning looking," thought Luana, who had been here a full hour without anyone taking any notice of her whatever. She forgot her chagrin, and her grim necessity of getting immediate employment, in the fascination of watching this woman.

The young man named Ramon was whispering something to his companion. It was evident he was infatuated with her, although she was certainly older than he was. He had no eyes for the dozens of handsome young contestants who swarmed everywhere. Not that any of them approached this woman in beauty or sex-appeal, thought Luana. She stood alone.

Luana stepped hastily forward. She said: "Pardon me, but your cigarette has just fallen, and will burn your dress." She swooped down and retrieved it, crushing it out in the fern tub.

"Oh, how careless of me! Thanks very much." The woman turned and gave a long look at Luana. It was an appraising look —a critical look—as though for the first time she was aware of the reason of being here.

"I haven't met you before, my dear. I take it you're a competitor. What's your name."

"Luana Waters."

A New Friend

"How divinely poetic!" The woman opened her eyes, and Luana saw they were of a startling jade green. She thought: That's why she wears the necklace and brandishes the cigarette holder—to bring out the color of her eyes. She's clever!"

She said aloud, with a faint smile: "I'm glad you like my name. No one else here seems to be the least interested in it—or in me. I guess I was foolish to think I had any chance in this competition."

"But of course you have, I shall see that you have. Ramon, put down her name at once. And go over to those tiresome women at the end of the room—they're judging today, my dear—and tell them I've entered Miss Luana Waters as my bet."

Ramon moved elegantly from the waistline, rising with alacrity, and wiggled, eel-like, through the mob.

* * *

The ballroom of the Hotel Sanouet was crowded. It was the fateful Friday afternoon of the big charity fashion-show.

Exclamations broke into handclapping as Number 15, who had the pale beauty of a moonflower, swayed across the stage. Eyes went hastily to programs. Voices murmured: "Luana Waters."

"She's the most exquisite thing I've seen in years. She has just my figure, too," drawled wealthy Mrs. Joel Vandaveer to her olive-skinned partner.

Mr. Adolphe Quackenbush, well-known couturier of Fifth Avenue, breezed to their table. Mrs. Vandeveer repeated her remark. Mr. Quackenbush bowed. Her words carried weight. Was not Mrs. Joel Vandeveer one of his very best customers?

A "Natural"

But his expert eye had already approved Luana's lissom lines. For modelling his gowns, she would be a "natural."

She had to win. She had to get a job. She couldn't last another three days on her money.

She had been terrified to walk out here, to run the gamut of the sharp, critical eyes of "Society."

Although she had hated the way his fingers touched and lingered on her skin as he had given the last touches to her various gowns, backstage, it had given her confidence that Monsieur Armand, right-hand man of Adolphe Quackenbush and manager of the fashion show, had murmured to her that she was "ravissante" . . . "adorable!"

Congress Adores Gay-Speckled Tweeds

THOUGH TWEEDS take kindly to the rain, these bright-speckled suits were of such a special order that they were equipped with rubberized crepe cape and raincoat, to take part in the rainy-day show, and each ensemble was awarded the black-and-silver tag of the Fashion Congress.

Left, Miss Nancy Wellington models the creamy tweed with navy, red and gold nubs. Red is repeated in the belt and jacket fastening. Navy, true to the dark-accent-for-light-colors rule, is used in the tailored blouse, the saucer-crowned felt hat and the silk rain-cape with military shoulders.

Right, Miss Louise Ranney wears imported tweed in a strict and authoritative copy of a Molyneux suit, as sponsored by Harper's Bazaar. Checked in tawny brown, it has flecks of powder blue and vermillion—either of which makes a glorious accent. The tie-neck blouse is vermillion, and so is the punched leather belt. Spicy Gallic touches intrigued Fashion Congress jurors immensely—vermillion buttons on the sleeve, crossed straps holding the belt, exquisite cut, and ingenious handling of the bias in the skirt. The soft, tawny brown was repeated in hat and patent leather bag. And her white silk crepe raincoat, with swagger back, raglan shoulders and white pearl buttons, is nothing less than ravishing!

For shopping information on either ensemble, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Given in Marriage

CHAPTER 612

Dicky lifted me bodily from my chair as soon as the closet door had closed upon Lillian and Harry, and carried me over to my bed.

Then, stooping, he removed my shoes, and looked up at me militantly.

"I give you five minutes to get undressed and under those covers," he said. "You're going to get some sleep for the rest of this night, if I have to clout you on the head and give you concussion to do it. I'm going to camp over here so I can jump up at any emergency. Lights will be out in three hundred seconds, so you would better get a move on."

He was as good as his word. I hurried through my undressing while he provided the sofa couch with blankets and pillows, and then divested himself of shoes, coat, waistcoat and necktie. At the beginning of the last minute he had named, he crossed the room, and pulling the coverlet higher over my shoulders, stooped and kissed me tenderly.

"Good little filly," he said. "Under the wire with a minute to spare. Remember, now. Do a good job of sleeping!"

He kissed me again, then opened the windows wide, covered himself snugly on the couch and turned off the lights from the switch within reach of his hand.

It was Lillian who roused me the next morning with a hand on shoulder gently shaking me. When I opened my eyes, she hastily set a hand upon my lips.

"I rapped upon the closet door —very light, I will admit, for I wanted no echo of that knock to get out into the hall—and then, getting no response, I took the liberty of walking in."

"What can I do for you?" I asked in the same noiseless fashion of speech she was employing.

"Plenty," she answered tersely. "I'm pretty certain Sam Brixton must be asleep by now, and it's a safe time to get that box into the library where Lee Chow is so anxiously waiting for it."

LEE CHOW FEARS TROUBLE

"Have you seen him?" I asked, surprised.

"No, but I've seen Hugh, and he says the old boy worried the first party of the night because the box was in the bank, and when Hugh finally told him it was safe in the house, he has spent every waking minute between his fitful dozes in fear that you will be murdered in your bed and the box stolen. I think Hugh is a bit nervous himself upon the first count."

I stared at her.

CAMOUFLAGE

"But, why?" I asked. "It isn't my box or my business. I don't mean that the way it sounds," I added, suddenly contrite, "and, of course, I'll do anything you wish, but I really don't see what—"

THOSE in the know predict that prices of peaches will be rising, so that now is a good time to take advantage of a sale of the No. 2½ tins of this popular fruit. They are seling two for 25 cents at a chain store this week. These come either in halves or slices, both of which have many uses.

RIPE and stuffed olives in the same jar give enough variety in olives for one party. 8½-ounce jars are sell for 35c. This would seem to be a most practical way of purchasing olives.

* * *

A NEW Swedish-style mustard gives just the right touch to appetizers, hors d'oeuvres, salad dressings and sandwiches. This mustard is made by the manufacturers of a fine appetizer wafer and has been developed as a result of the work they have done on this subject. A four-ounce jar sells for 15c.

* * *

PRESERVES are in daily use in most homes. A particularly popular dessert is cream cheese served with preserves. A large assortment — strawberry, raspberry, blackberry, pineapple, cherry and apricot—sells at very special prices at one of the chain stores, averaging a saving of 5c. Two 1-pound jars for 29c or one 2-pound jar for 28c.

* * *

ONE of the simplest, most practical and most efficient nut choppers we have seen consists of a glass jar of one-cup capacity with a screw-on top that also contains the chopping knives. Simply put the nuts in, turn the handle around and the chopped nuts drop through into the measuring jar. Gone is the bother of chopping nuts and having them jump around on the board or table! Sells for $1.

* * *

ALSO belongin gto the same family and developed as a result of the popularity of the nut chopper is the cheese grater made along the same lines. The cheese is simply placed in the grater which is screwed onto the jar. By turning the handle the cheese is grated and measured. This is also $1. Either of these would make a charming bridge or shower gift.

* * *

SCALLOP shells afford a very attractive way of serving a scalloped or creamed fish, whether for party or family meals, particularly in the season of Lent. The fish looks so good when it is brought to the table after having been placed on the shell and browned in a very hot oven. These sell for 10 cents each.

* * *

ANOTHER cheese or hors d'oeuvre board that caught our fancy is a practical one. Rectangular in shape, a knife fits into a slot on one side and is always where you want it. There is a holder for appetizers on toothpicks on the other side. This is in the form of a fish. These sell for $1.85.

* * *

SPRING cleaning is no longer a period of great inconvenience to the entirely family. An equally efficient cleaning goes on all through the year. Modern equipment has brought about this complete change. A small hand vacuum cleaner that can be used on any upholstery, curtains or rugs is selling at a very low price of $9.85, usually $13.50.

* * *

IN THE spring a woman's fancy turns to brighter and newer things for the home. We want new touches for serving food. Small watermelon balls now come packed in mint-flavored syrup. Grenadine as well as in the plain syrup. An eight-ounce jar sells for 17 cents, or three for 50 cents. Serve as an accompaniment to the meat, salad or dessert course or with hot breads.

A Pencil-Slim Ensemble

MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN 9799

"Born to be loved!" this sporty two-piecer, which will win both the feminine and masculine vote.

It will win another easy triumph, too, with all who make their own frocks, for its watch-word is simplicity without fussiness.

The simple jacket goes together in no time and a half dozen darts nip in the waistline so that your jacket lies smoothly 'neath its narrow belt. Pockets are as handy as they are decorative, but may be omitted.

You'll realize a double advantage with this two-piecer for its pencil-slim skirt may be worn with other blouses and jackets as well. You'll love it in shantung, crash or washable sports crepe, though, if weakness is prints, you will be them too.

Complete, D signed Marian Martin Sew Ch included.

Pattern 9799 may be ordered only in sizes 4, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4¼ yards 36 inch fabric.

THE EIGHTH WOMAN

Why She is Always Herself

All women are not born "free and equal." Nature being what it is. Many readers of this newspaper know this to their sorrow. A woman's days are not all alike. There are difficult days when some women suffer severely.

These didn't used to be anything to do about it. Eight million had to suffer month after month. Today, a million have accepted the relief to be had from Midol.

As a rule, it is a knowing woman who keeps that little aluminum case tucked in her purse. One who knows what to wear, where to go, how to take care of herself, how to get the most out of life. That "eighth woman" who has learned to rely on Midol!

A smart woman doesn't try every pill or tablet somebody says is good for periodic pain. But Midol is recommended by specialists. It can form no habit because it is not a narcotic. But Midol is effective even when the pain has reached its height. It's effective for hours, so two tablets should see you comfortably through your worst day.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Bare Legs and Bare Backs Too Often Indicate Bare Brains

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A girl doesn't have to hire a brass band to attract the attention of young men.

Of course, I don't really mean that young women go about preceded by drums and horns and trumpets. But there are a good many girls who seek the equivalent of a band.

I refer to that type of girl who applies rouge and lip-stick with the determination of a sign-painter, adopts fantastic hair styles and selects dresses and hats with the intention of shocking men into looking at them.

The girl whom I have in mind is one who is artificial from her bare legs to her peroxide-bleached curls. And were one permitted to look into her brain, he would find the views on life centered there to be quite as false and untrue as her exterior.

This kind of young woman does not attract sensible men. They may arouse the admiration to a certain type of fellow—the man no real girl wants. And, in later life, she will spend her days crying over the hardships she has suffered. The truth will be that though she will never have sufficient intelligence to realize it—that she got everything she bargained for.

My advice to all young women is to make their exterior reflect what they want the world to believe exists in the interior. BARE LEGS AND BARE BACKS TOO OFTEN INDICATE BARE HEADS

I am sending today's $5 check to Miss Z., who lives in metropolitan Boston. Her interesting letter follows

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My mother and dad are two of the grandest people in the world. They have been married more than 30 years and were happy until about two years ago.

My father's [illegible] nights—from midnight to [illegible]. His business all absent and he does everything [illegible] to give my mother all the luxuries he can afford. His [illegible] salary is here as soon as he [illegible] it.

In some way, a suspicion of unfaithfulness had entered my mother's mind, and no amount of reasoning can change it. If my father goes out for a little while she imagines he is calling on another woman.

With the exception of these ill-founded doubts, my mother is everything that a good mother could hope to be. She is lovable and kind and would do anything to help a person in need.

Miss Fairfax, please read this letter and help us to find the road back to happiness.

ANXIOUS DAUGHTER

DEAR LITTLE FRIEND

Your mother is passing through an exceedingly trying period in her life. Your father understands, I am sure. My advice is to be tolerant and kind. Happiness will return of its own accord in a year or so.

If I were you, I'd encourage my mother to go out as much as possible. I'd plan little picnic parties at the beaches this summer, and I'd make it a point to take her to the movies at least twice a week. Don't leave her to her thoughts. Provide new interests.

The responsibility for your mother's future health and happiness rests upon you and your father. Don't fail her. She needs you. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

May I warn all girls against marrying in haste? I married in opposition to the wishes of my mother, and I have repented ever since. My husband turned out to be a big "bully."

I have three beautiful children, but they will be wrecks if he continues to act the way he does now. I am 23 and have nothing to look forward to but worry and fear. EXPERIENCED.

DEAR LITTLE MOTHER:

Your husband will continue his present conduct just as long as you permit him. Put your foot down firmly. Tell him that you are a free human being and that you do not intend to tolerate his domineering ways another ten minutes. The trouble with some husbands is that they are unable to draw a distinction between the women they married and the property they bought and paid for.

As long as you make yourself a doormat, you must expect to be walked upon. I have repeated that a good many times, but it is one bit of advice that will stand plenty of repetition.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 14 years of age and would like to have a boy friend, all my own. Don't you think I am old enough? My mother says "no."

MARY.

LITTLE GIRL

At 14 you should be studying and preparing yourself for the charming woman every girl desires to be. Better forget your hopes for boy friends for a few years. Remember, Mary, every hour you study now is an hour added to your charm in future years.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I have kept company with a young man for more than two years. Recently I was compelled to call off a date because of business. The next day he informed me he had gone to bed at 8 o'clock the night of the cancelled date, and he has refused to come to see me since. PUZZLED

MY DEAR GIRL:

If a young man is so possessive and unwilling to understand as the young man you describe, you'd be wise to look for another friend. Courtship is a period of probation, and those prospective husbands who reveal themselves as mean, little individuals should be avoided.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 18 and have about as much freedom as a 10-year-old. My father, who is permitting me to take an expensive piano course, insists that I stay at home every night and practice. For me to see a young man is to start a revolution in the home.

Now, Miss Fairfax, don't you think a girl of my age has a right to stay out until 10 o'clock evenings? MISS B.

DEAR LITTLE STUDENT:

If I were you, I'd continue to study the piano. I'd make up my mind that for two years I'd learn everything the course has to offer. In short, I'd get my full money's worth.

Two years from now you will, in all probability, attract a better man than you could hope for now. Then no one has a right to pass by grasp all its advantages.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

4 Radio Aspirants Hitch-Hike Home

Stamford, Conn., April 1 (INS)—Disillusioned in their hope for radio fame, four weary Worcester, Mass., "Hill Billys," continued their hitch-hike homeward today after a night's lodging and breakfast from police.

The quartette wandered in and told of their attempt to compete on a Sunday night amateur program in New York. They were told they might have an opportunity in a week or two.

They said they were Robert Dumel, Alfred Bretzel and Amon Sears, all 16, and Ronald Lenot, 17.

Reclaim Sparkle

Anti-Wrinkle Eye Lotion Smoothes Away Lines

By ARLINE GOULD

DON'T for one minute think just because your husband once told you that you possessed the most beautiful eyes in the world—that they are still the enchanted pools of loveliness they were years ago.

Every age and lose that clear-cut look, the brilliance and sparkle which is youth itself just as surely as the moon shines over Miami or anywhere else. Unless eyes are nurtured, the delicate tissues bathed and given new tone—you will find them the most vulnerable spot in an otherwise youthful face.

The [illegible] you suddenly look in the [illegible] and discover lines [illegible] tired lines that [illegible] wiped away—a fog [illegible] and shadow—the flight [illegible] youth has indeed begun.

No matter how cleverly you use [illegible] and eye shadow, your [illegible] cannot possibly appear bright [illegible] unless you devote [illegible] minutes a day to their care.

In discovering how neglectful [illegible] are about the most [illegible] feature of face—the [illegible] women who keep their [illegible] fully young and [illegible] as all sleeping. You [illegible] the eyes which first reveal [illegible].

You can preserve the eyes of youth—the same eyes your husband once told you possessed deep, dark pools of loveliness—if [illegible] them the daily care they [illegible] due.

There are [illegible] sorts of eye lotions and preparations on the market which do wonders in reducing and also help to strengthen the delicate eye nerves—one of the newer Miss [illegible] creations—a preparation [illegible] it only cleanses, refreshes, but smoothes away lines [illegible] wrinkle eye lotion.

It is intended primarily for tired, red eyes, but a few drops applied to normal eyes on a tiny, cotton pad will seem as refreshing as discovering a new scent. Although it's hard to think of any lotion as being as light as air, this phrase really describes this preparation.

It is inexpensive in price, too. All you have to do is to put cotton pads over the eyes and relax. Instantly the lotion absorbs the tired look, smoothes away lines and refreshes. It is so gentle and amazingly efficacious that since having tried it you will never again be without a bottle on your bathroom shelf.

If you would like to know the name of this anti-wrinkle eye lotion call Arline Gould, Liberty 6000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

New Time Tables For Maine Central

The streamlined "Flying Yankee" of the Maine Central Railroad will go into the M. C. A. road will put into service until some time [illegible] in April, the Maine Central [illegible] announced today when it was revealed that new time tables will be available tomorrow.

The new time tables contain schedules of a new bus service between Brunswick, Richmond and Augusta and also indicate that all through trains will continue to operate via Lewiston with bus connections at Winthrop to and from all Kennebec river points.

Roosevelt's NRA Goes Into Oblivion

Washington, April 1 (INS)—The NRA, President Roosevelt's most ambitious recovery experiment passed into official oblivion today.

Quietly and without ceremony the one-powerful agency which [illegible] Hoover's affected life of [illegible] every individual in the United States, ceased its final perfunctory operations at midnight.

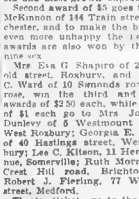
Unnecessary Finesse

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A certain expert player of my acquaintance has gone around for a week concealing his cards under his vest as soon as he has finished looking at them.

The reason for this strange habit lies in this hand played against him recently in a Rubber Bridge game.

South, Dealer
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3♣	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♡	Pass	6♡	Pass
6♣ (1)	Pass	7♡	Double (2)
Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) A very bad bid, induced by greediness for honors.

(2) Tempting, but not good.

West opened the ten of clubs, dummy played the Jack and East delightedly put up the Queen. Declarer took a long time to study the situation, and then could win by setting up his own hand was four heart tricks, five spade tricks and one diamond.

His only hope of making the contract was to trump three little clubs in his own hand and draw trumps from the dummy, subsequently taking the five spades and the diamond. The dummy would need three entries—two for club ruffs and one to draw the last trump. The King of spades furnished one entry and a trump furnished another but the third was lacking in fact.

At last South had it and ruffed the third club with the King. Then a low heart was played and passed the deuce and dummy supplied the eight-spot. When this had no effect West played hard to his seat and put a card in his pocket. The red of the hand proceeded as planned and West has not been the same since.

A second club was ruffed in declarer's hand, another spade led to the King, the third club ruffed with the Ace, and the last trump led to dummy's Ace, which the hearts, the rest of the spades and the Ace of diamonds furnished a total of 13 tricks.

Home Institute Road to Popularity

THE MOST popular girl in the crowd, that's Bess. She doesn't seem to "work at it," either. She just has a way with her. Let's hear what she's saying now, to Lee and Tommie

"And was my face red when I discovered I had mailed Mrs Gildersleeve the laundry list instead of the bread-and-butter note I meant to send her!"

Only an amusing little episode, with the joke turned on herself, not on someone else. You never hear any sarcasm or ridicule from Bess, nor any talk that's too clever, making others feel that [illegible] could get off anything so witty herself.

Natural poise are another must [illegible] you'll have to be clear of [illegible] and hilarity, the kind of [illegible] sense that makes other people feel conspicuous. How many do hate that feeling!

Women like her because she's genuinely friendly but never asks any of those silly little trading questions that pry into your personal affairs. She never forgets to return books or money which she has borrowed or apologizes in any other way.

In short, Bess [illegible] living and friends. [illegible] to do the [illegible] one penny things that make people [illegible].

"Your Figure, Madame!"

Exercise Is Magic Health Builder

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

IF you are too thin and getting thinner, do something about it, for curves seem to be permanently in favor.

Your underweight may be caused by a finicky appetite which will not let you get enough calories. In such case exercise is just the spring tonic you need.

Exercise is the last thing any thin person ever thinks of taking, but don't overlook the fact that improved muscle culture gives you a healthy appetite. For the person who is underweight, exercise benefits the functioning of the system, to aid digestion and stimulate circulation.

The efficiency of the muscular tissues and the nervous system are [illegible] and [illegible] the weight gainer will [illegible] strength, go with unhealthy thinness and that a strong nervous system accompanies good muscle tone.

With regard to the figure, it is true that exercise normalizes and develops harmonious proportions, with lovely lines, natural curves and normal weight.

Large Trunk Muscles

Rational exercise means that exercise is fitted to the needs of the individual. To offset a sedentary life, the majority of people should have exercise for the large trunk muscles.

These muscles not only control the functioning of the lungs and govern health; the build the figure to shape. Hence walking, swimming, golf and the daily dozen designed for the abdomen, hips and thighs are particularly helpful.

The amount of specific exercise varies, of course, with individual activity. Authorities agree that at least an hour should be given daily to exercise, avoiding the late, a trunk muscle [illegible] build and the daily routine [illegible] the time for planned exercise. Thin, nervous types [illegible] trying to gain weight need all the sleep they can soak up, and should not bounce out of bed to race through setting-up exercises.

Morning sets the pace for the day, and underweights should arise leisurely, take time for a health-building breakfast, and avoid getting off to a hectic start. If time permits, a few stretching exercises and a relaxing morning walk are excellent health builders.

Regular exercise must be a plan of the underweight as well as the overweight. Swim at [illegible] twice a week, keep in touch with your daily dozen and get your share of outdoor activity. An exercise routine improves nerve strain and promotes health and sleep. It establishes a high health level and aids the too thin individual to normal weight.

See your doctor, and if he agrees to mild exercise for you send stamped addressed envelope and ask for my set of exercises entitled "General Exercises To Keep You Trim, Slim and Fit as a Fiddle." This introductory set is not strenuous, and it paves the way for the specific exercises needed by both the fat and the thin.

CURLEY TO SEE WPA CHIEF ON FLOOD AID

Conference is scheduled between Governor Curley and Lawrence Westbrook, assistant national WPA administrator, today on the federal government's flood relief plans in Massachusetts and New England.

Westbrook, who arrived here last night after a survey of flood relief in Maine and New Hampshire, also plans to discuss the cutting of red tape in the Massachusetts rehabilitation program with Acting State WPA Administrator Paul Edwards.

On his arrival in Boston Westbrook repeated last week's promise of federal officials that work would be provided for all employable persons in flood reconstruction and rehabilitation work.

WORK OUTLINED

Plans are under way to provide work wherever it is necessary, he said, and indicated that there is still a chance that many projects in Massachusetts may be reconstructed as WPA projects.

In connection with WPA flood reconstruction projects, Edwards warned today that they must be separated carefully from work which is not really a part of flood repair. He declared that the needs of many communities could be reduced by keeping the scope of projects confined to flood repair.

CONFER WITH CURLEY

In Western Massachusetts a meeting of the newly formed Federation of Mayors and Selectmen of that area voted to send a delegation to Boston to confer with Governor Curley and Edwards on flood reconstruction work for that area.

In Springfield heads of federal agencies in Massachusetts conferred on plans for coordination of the flood rehabilitation work in the Connecticut Valley.

Flood rehabilitation conferences in other sections of New England also advanced plans for restoring the inundated areas.

"Please Call Mr. Horn"

When Miss Vera DeCosta of Back Bay arrived at her office this morning to find a note asking her to call Mr. Horn at Capitol 7400, she remembered just in time it was April Fool's Day. For that number is that of the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

STEEL MAGNATE FLAYS DEAL'S NEW TAXES

Washington, April 1 (INS)—The Administration's new tax program would "destroy independent steel fabricators and thus foster monopoly," Curtis Green, president of the Minneapolis-Moline Power Implement Company, told the Senate Finance Committee today.

Appearing for [illegible] of hearings on [illegible] income taxes on undistributed profits, he said it would [illegible] his company or big steel companies.

[illegible] undistributed profits tax program would [illegible] from another quarter, he said, W. A. Beardshaver of Amsterdam, Holland.

He predicted the plan would drive [illegible] corporations out of the American market and tend to reduce American foreign trade.

Tracing the threatened increase in taxes and fluctuating profits and [illegible] Green said:

"Looking ahead, should the same thing happen for the next 10 years, and the law as it is reported be in effect, I do not believe we could continue operations. Should we be able to limp along in 10 years the end would be very close."

[illegible] would repeal [illegible] undistributed profits tax on [illegible] and substitution of a flat 10 per cent income tax on dividend and [illegible] income.

BRANN STANDS FIRM AGAINST 3RD TERM

Lewiston, Me., April 1—Governor Lewis O. Brann stands firm today on his reiterated contention that he is not interested in a third term as Governor of Maine.

He proposed to confer with [illegible] party leaders however, on the [illegible] of a candidate to succeed [illegible] when [illegible] and second administrations.

"I am not unmindful of the duties and responsibility I owe the party and the people of Maine, but I am not unmindful of the responsibility I owe my family and myself," was the way he put it at the Democratic state convention.

He turned apparently deaf ears to the [illegible] of 1,708 delegates [illegible] to be a candidate to succeed himself.

Cries of "We Want Brann" and "Louie Can You Take It?" failed to [illegible] him to cast his hat in the [illegible] Two-thirds of the armory [illegible] delegates rooted their [illegible] by Governor Brann [illegible] opposed.

51 April Fools

Two records were broken between 7:00 and 8:53 a. m. today in the "Turret," where four policemen watch the Boston police emergency line—Devonshire 1212.

For the entire period not one emergency call came in ASKING for the services of the police—and there is a world of difference.

For every one of the record number of 51 calls was an April Fool stunt.

Ex-Teacher Loses Fight for Job

Cary Reeds, former Revere school teacher who was [illegible] because she married, lost [illegible] her fight for [illegible] today.

Her petition for [illegible] was denied by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court.

In the opinion written by Justice Stanley E. Qua the court said:

"The crux of the matter is [illegible] or not married women should teach in the public schools. Many local school boards in this country and England have taken the same attitude which the defendant here takes."

PERFUME FIRE HALTS TRAFFIC

Traffic in Tremont street along the Common was tied up for 20 minutes today by a fire in a show window of Carroll's perfumery shop, 169 Tremont street, near Avery street.

A patrol [illegible] the street and traffic was [illegible] over Beacon Hill via Chestnut, Mount Vernon and Walnut streets.

A fire [illegible] extinguished the blaze [illegible] on fire off [illegible] who estimated damage at $1000.

Quartieri Dies in Milan

Milan, Italy, April 1 (AP)—Signor [illegible] Quartieri, 71, who headed [illegible] Italian industrial mission [illegible] United States during the World War, died today.

LOWDEN G. O. P. KEYNOTE PICK

Washington, April 1 (AP)—Former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois was tentatively selected today as keynoter for the Republican national convention at Cleveland.

To balance off Lowden, a midwesterner, Republican leaders were discussing selection of an eastern man as permanent chairman of the convention. Former Ambassador and Senator Walter Edge of New Jersey was said by high party officials to be a likely choice.

Both posts will be formally filled at a meeting of the committee on arrangements for the convention April 21 in Cleveland.

Heavy Quake Reported

Manila, P. I., April 1 (AP)—A severe earthquake centered 1200 miles south of Manila, apparently in the region of the Celebes, was recorded on seismographs here.

...that doesn't give me what I want in a smoke

I want my cigarette mild, of course—I hardly think anybody enjoys a strong cigarette. But deliver me from the flat, insipid kind.

I find a great deal of pleasure in Chesterfields. They're mild and yet they seem to have more taste and aroma. I enjoy them.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

Well, I seem to be a day late on the "Pickwick Papers" centenary. But that is not an infrequent situation when anniversaries are concerned.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

If you are over-careful you mark down the date so far in advance that by the time the day has arrived you have forgotten it completely. Or you never hear of it until the day after the event.

Anyway, yesterday the Dickens Fellowship was celebrating with pomp and circumstance here in Boston. Over in England varied organized Dickensians were taking coaches and four—or six—or eight, even—from London to Rochester or from London to Ipswich or Bath or Canterbury, all in memory of that great and good man who loved to take coaches and go places and do things, and who unconsciously infected most Americans with a desire to go over to England some time and go to some of those places and do some of those things—particularly to eat and drink in the right Pickwickian manner.

For yesterday was the hundredth anniversary of the first number of "Pickwick Papers" the book that made Charles Dickens the best known and best beloved of Victorian writers. It was issued in shilling numbers and the first chapters were written to illustrate drawings already made by an artist named Seymour.

Thackeray Applies But Is Refused Job

When Seymour died, it is recorded that an obscure and unsuccessful artist applied for the job of doing the drawings for the phenomenally successful tale, a tall, awkward, diffident young gentleman with a broken nose. His name was William Makepeace Thackeray. He didn't get the job. Later he was to write—and illustrate—"Vanity Fair."

The only way really to understand "Pickwick Papers" is to read "Sketches by Boz," that fascinating series of thumbnail sketches of London life as seen by a young genius whose university was the streets and whose guides to literature were the 18th century bits of realism in the old attic at home. There is the miracle—that a youngster almost without formal education should become the authentic voice of the great majority of Victorian England.

He could not deal with the aristocracy—"it was Dickens' greatest glory that he could not describe a gentleman"—but with the poor and the underdogs of society he was always sympathetically at home. Yet no one ever laughed more heartily at the comic quality of those same poor, when their individualities and eccentricities made that comic quality irresistible.

Created Like Lavish, Generous-Handed God

We do not quote freely from Dickens today as they did in the days of Louisa May Alcott, who may be said to have known him by heart. But the older generation that can quote from him undoubtedly has a treasure of humor, pathos and observation in the memory that the rest of us of today can hardly match. For Charles Dickens created like a lavish and generous-handed god.

Full cities, with every street and lane and public square pullulating with humanity, every grotesque or pathetic face or curious figure unique and unforgettable. And one knows that, for each figure once seen but never forgotten, there are a hundred others that would have been as memorable had Dickens had the time for them.

So yesterday, one likes to think, Moses Pickwick's famous coach went once more to Bath with Samuel Pickwick, Esq., inside and Samuel Weller on the box with the coachman, or in the dickey with the guard, ready to jump down at a moment's notice at any halt to replenish the case bottle with milk punch, or to bring his master some smoking hot brandy and water against the rigors of an English spring.

And at Bath, we have no doubt, were Messrs. Tupman and Winkle and Snodgrass waiting for him. And at home in Goswell street was Mrs. Bardell, puzzling over the note: "Chops and tomato sauce"; and once more the great story is under way!

SPRING SUNSHINE SMILES ON MODELS

Easter Parade to Be Riot of Colors Fashion Congress Models Decree

JOAN SAGENDORPH ALICE SCHOFIELD PATRICIA PIERCE KATHARINE BAKER

Public Gardens bridge becomes promenade for Easter Parade pre-view as Fashion Congress models stroll in the spring sunshine. Easter Parade clothes were modeled and discussed at yesterday's Fashion Congress session in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. Left to right the society girl models are: Miss Joan Sagendorph, Miss Alice Schofield, Miss Patricia Pierce and Miss Katharine Baker. The wide variety in spring hats as well as in popular suits types is illustrated by the attractive models.

MAD HATS IN FAVOR

SOCIETY DEBS SHOW PARIS TAILLEURS

A slightly mad hat . . . costume suit of wool or tweed . . . deleriously lovely colors—soft daylight blue and dahlia, gray and sunshine yellow . . . a frill and a flower . . . chin high and shoulders squared.

Suggestions from the Fashion Congress for your appearance in the Easter parade.

The group of [illegible] Paris models who were met at [illegible] by Eleanor Rose of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel staff, and discussed Easter Parade fashions submitted before Boston forms and specialty shops.

Mrs. Mark Hopkins of Dorchester, who arranged the society section headed the committee of fashion jurors.

The other judges were: Mrs. H. A. Houghton, Miss Edouard Rice, Mrs. Kenneth Gray, Mrs. J. H. Dyke, Mrs. P. P. Morton Jr., Mrs. Hamilton Heard, Mrs. Harry Frankenfield, Mrs. Louis Foley and Mr. Walter Wiesen.

Congress a Guide

Miss Annice Brink, fashion editor of the Boston Evening American, told the judges the aims of the Fashion Congress.

"The Fashion Congress," she said, "is a guide to good taste for Boston women and is an authoritative source of fashion information for readers of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser."

[illegible] and from the [illegible] down to [illegible] Evening meaning, as the Easter Parade proves, you ladies should.

For instance, graduating [illegible] were [illegible] and dahlia, [illegible] gray, [illegible] navy blue and [illegible] wood pansy and [illegible] sunshine yellow [illegible] and [illegible] strawberry [illegible] wine.

[illegible] costumes which were [illegible] were Brown . . . [illegible] and [illegible] Accessories [illegible] modern predominated [illegible] Nubby and [illegible] were [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible] with their own with silk crepe and [illegible] to point to 2[illegible]0

Society Girl Models

Miss Alice Schofield, one of the society girl models, demonstrated the glamor of new interpretations of wool material when she modeled a suit in hyacinth blue trimmed with gray fox. Hyacinth and her blonde statliness made a combination which would stop any Easter Parade, the judges agreed.

"There's just one thing I dislike about that lovely suit," one of the judges said. "I think fox fur on the pockets is a bit 'too much.'"

Once again the judges proved alert to any detail which detracted from simplicity and good taste. Although not too keen on sensational, they seemed expressed typically Bostonian dislike for anything which verged on the "over-dressy" or [illegible].

For this reason rhinestone clips on a dressy coat were voted one most emphatically. So too was a ruffled blouse worn with elaborate fur.

Meets Boston Taste

A suit which met all the requirements of the [illegible] Boston taste was modeled by Miss Katharine Baker, [illegible] model. She [illegible] in the [illegible] suit of [illegible] imported wool and wore with [illegible] blouse and [illegible] dressy [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] was [illegible] sort [illegible] the [illegible] because was [illegible] more [illegible]

The Duke of Kent tailleur in gray [illegible] wool won its share of praise. Miss Patricia Pierce, [illegible] blonde debutante, who modeled, wore with it a wide-brimmed straw of navy blue and matching shoes.

Stores which exhibited clothes at yesterday's session were: Jordan Marsh Company, R. H. White Company, Lamson and Hubbard, Jay's Shop, Ross, Manahan, C. B. Hayes Cranmer and Company, F. [illegible] Slattery Company, and Theodore, Inc.

Safety Drive Lauded by Goodwin

The statewide highway safety campaign was hailed as a "remarkable success" today by Motor Vehicle Registrar Frank A. Goodwin as he announced that auto deaths in March totaled 40, as compared with 65 for the same month last year.

This result, he said, was due to the co-operation of law-enforcement agencies, municipal officials, civic and religious organizations, newspapers, motion picture theaters and radio stations, with the Governor's Safety Committee.

"It is to be hoped," he said, "that the success of this campaign will have a lasting effect throughout the year, and I have the assurance of all agencies that their splendid efforts will continue.

"Let us not forget that the killing of 800 persons and the maiming of 30,000 in a single year presents a major problem that requires the attention, not only of the agencies I have mentioned, but the co-operation of all our citizens."

During March, the registrar took away the licenses of 1891 drivers, 279 for drunken driving. Improper braking equipment resulted in the cancellation of 435 registrations.

Newton police have been requested to keep watch on vacant houses throughout the city following complaints that vandals have been entering them and causing damage.

OATH LAW O. K. SEEN

Dorgan Claims Sufficient Votes

Confidence that the Teachers' Oath law would be retained when the question for action in the House and Senate [illegible] the legislative committee adverse report was expected today by Representative Thomas [illegible] Dorgan [illegible]

Representative Dorgan issued a sensational blast [illegible] Professor Paul M. Wi[illegible]low, who resigned from the Tufts faculty rather than take the oath and who has long been a foe of the measure.

"There is no doubt in my mind but what the present Teachers' Oath law will still be on the statute books when the House and Senate finish voting on it, despite the 7 to 6 vote of the committee to repeal it," Dorgan said. "Two members of the committee did not vote, reserving their rights.

"I have nine more votes in the House and one more in the Senate than we had last year, when the bill was passed and became law."

The [illegible] Professor [illegible] Mc[illegible]

"Prof. Winslow is an able man, and he should go to the University in Moscow, Russia, which is looking for good men to teach the Karl Marx doctrine of destroying Christianity and love of country," Dorgan declared.

"I would advise Winslow to see the president of the American Institute of Cultural Relations with the Soviet Republic, and I am sure that he will arrange accommodations.

"I hope the professor will make good in Russia, because Communism is not a bit subject to teach Americans."

Fr. Corrigan To Talk on Reds

The Rev. Jones I. Corrigan, S. J., professor of ethics at Boston College, will speak on Communism to the freshman class of Boston College at their first annual Communion Breakfast Sunday.

Other speakers include Lieutenant-Colonel Paul G. Kirk, commissioner of public safety, who will comment on the recent floods, and Doctor Frederick J. Gillis, assistant superintendent of Boston public schools.

The affair will be held in the Hotel Continental, Cambridge. Henri Valade is chairman.

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS FOR TODAY

ANN MARSTERS

I'm out to beat the ponies on a $500 bankroll. I'm going to try to prove it is possible to beat the races.

Pittsburgh Phil made a fortune from the thoroughbreds. The famous plunger of bygone days earned close to two million dollars. So why can't we see what we can do?

And Walter E. O'Hara, Narragansett Park's managing director, has presented me a $1,000 check. Five hundred dollars was deposited in the Christmas Basket Fund and the other $500 was left as a betting stake.

So today we start this unique experiment and for the next two months we'll see whether our knowledge of horse flesh holds true. The Eastern racing season gets underway at Bowie this afternoon and I'm betting two dollars on Judy Johnson's LATIVICH to take down the verdict in the second number.

I'm hoping to get a price on DANCING CLOUD in the nightcap at the Maryland racing strip. So I'm going to bet $2 on this one's nose.

Down at Tropical Park, the ponies are still holding forth. Mrs. Emil Denemark's entry of BROWN FEATHERS and CHASAR in the sixth appears like a safe hazard. So down goes $2 to win on this entry.

BOOCAP and UKRAINE running as the Rossiter and Coppa entry in the eighth at Tropical seem well spotted. Either one of these horses can beat the field. It's $2 to win here.

And the final wager of the day is out at Oaklawn Park, where I'm betting $2 to place on ALLEN Z in the fifth stanza.

And remember a little bit of advice. TAB Florida conditioned horses at the current Bowie meeting. They will have edge over horses wintered at Maryland.

Watch for tomorrow's Boston Evening American and see how Miss Ann Marsters fared in her first day as girl handicapper.

AHEARN

Vanderbilt Leads Drive To 'Rock'

By BOB AHEARN

Leading the list of applicants for stall space at Rockingham Park's Spring meeting is the Sagamore Farm of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, leading money winner in 1935.

Vanderbilt's trainer, J. H. Stotler, wired Racing Secretary Jim Munroe to reserve space for 30 thoroughbreds.

"I'm going to show you the world's fastest race horse in Airflame," said Trainer J. H. 'Bud' Stotler. "He's not much for looks, but he's won four straight races, equalled and then broke the world's record for three-eighths of a mile and won a stake in mud in 1935-5. He's the fastest horse I've ever trained—faster than Balko," concluded Stotler. Loose race goers are looking forward to the debut in these parts of Airflame, son of Ariel out of Flamante. The Vanderbilt youngster was a favorite at Santa Anita's winter meeting.

Jim Munroe

Racing Secretary Jim Munroe is now entrenched in his office at Rockingham, making plans for the spring meeting, slated to get underway May 2.

* * *

It'll be several days yet before the horses will be sent out in trials over Narragansett's racing strip. Trainers have to get the train legs out of their charges before putting them through strenuous workouts.

Indications point to one of the most successful meetings ever held, when Narragansett's spring session opens. Already more than 2000 applications have been received and the big problem right now is making room for all the applicants.

* * *

Walter O'Hara, Narragansett's chieftain, has left to take in the opening of the Eastern racing season at Bowie. Mrs. Walter O'Hara's New Deal is a nominee for the Bowie Inaugural, feature of today's opening program.

Lou Smith, Rockingham's general manager plans to leave tomorrow for several days of the sport at the Maryland racing strip.

* * *

Signs of activity at Suffolk Downs are noticeable these days. General Manager Allan Wilson has the ground crews getting the racing strip into shape and in a week it will be possible for horses to work out.

Wilson is pleased with the way applications have come in for the summer meeting and from a glance at the stall reservations, one can see that the elite of turfdom will display their wares at Suffolk Downs.

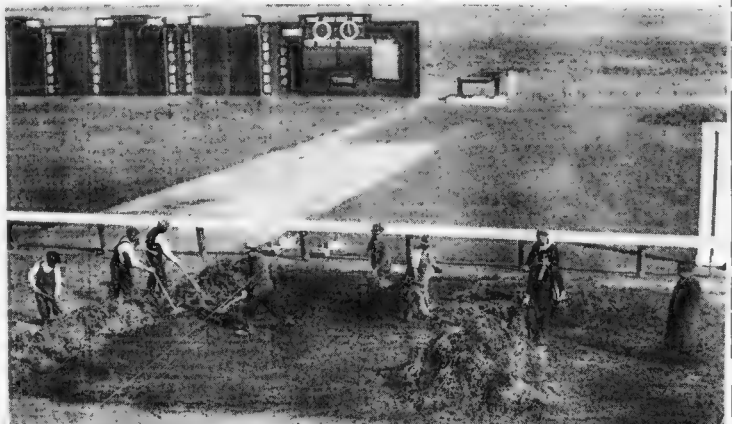
Suffolk Starts Dressing for Race Opening



Despite the fact that Suffolk Downs doesn't open for over two months, work has already been started in getting the track in good shape for the long summer meeting. Joe Tomasello is shown at extreme right supervising workers as they clean up at the finish pole.

$40 TOP for Schmeling LOUIS GO

New York, April 1 (AP)—Mebbe Bobby Jones had better save some of those sub-par rounds for later in the week.

President Ford C. Frick is back in town after touring National League camps.

The Dodgers are threatening to go to the pest with a new man in every position. Charlie Dressen, who used to be top beat in the newspaper game, knows men in the art of general mayhem.

Pop Foster is due here this week at training camp for Johnny Mc-Laughlin who fights Tony Canzoneri May 8. . . . Young Joe D. Mungo is doing all right . . . He was guest columnist in a New York paper the other day.

$40 Tops for Fight

Bobby Jones is proudest of his "grand slam"—winning four major titles in one year . . . But he always got his biggest kick out of running the track prone . . . in 12 open tournaments—nine here and three in England, the famous Archdeacon was second or better 11 times.

He finished on top seven times and second four. Try and tie that one . . . Red Bill McCarney, the schedule fight promoter, says Max Schmeling has a fine chance to simply ruin Joe Louis . . . Mike Jacobs immediately announced he would charge a $40 top . . . The Cardinals are said to be negotiating for Joe Stripp, the forgotten man of Brooklyn.

They say Lefty Gomes has all his stuff back except his control . . . The south is so strong for Jimmy Braddock he's going on a third Dixie tour beginning April 10 . . . Stuart Bell, Cleveland Press, won the crawfish eating championship at a party Lefty Gilbert pitched for the visiting newspaper boys at New Orleans last week . . .

Sonja Heinie is glad she turned pro . . . Says there are too many petty jealousies among European figure skating officials . . . Also, her share of the gates isn't hard to take.

Simmons' Slump Worries Cochrane

STENGEL STARTS USING KNIFE

Clearwater, April 1 (AP)—Three ball players up with the Dodgers from the minors will soon be back whence they came.

Casey Stengel said Vince Sherlock would be returned to Indianapolis; Wayne Osborne to the San Francisco Missions, and Colonel Buster Mills to the Rochester Red Wings.

Only two players, Johnny Cooney and Oscar Eckhardt, veteran outfielders, remain on trial.

Pine Bluff, Ark.—An aggressive bid for the Cardinals' baseball business in the Ozarks was made by Pine Bluff, Ark., promoters, who announced plans to build a baseball park to accommodate 5000 persons. Already more than 2000 applications have been received and the big problem right now is making room for all the applicants.

Birmingham, Ala. — Surgeon Chandler was transferred from the Yankees to their farm team Newark yesterday by the simply novel method of moving him from one bench to the other during the fifth inning of the game between the teams, which Newark won 7-3.

Pine Bluff, Ark.—Lloyd Brown of Lefts Lee have been assigned by Manager Steve O'Neill to scout duty today as the first moves for Giants in the eighth game of their series.

Lakeland, Fla.—Manager Mickey Cochrane was worried over a couple of batting slumps, one of them his own, as his Detroit Tigers prepared to engage the St. Louis Browns today. The other hitting decline concerned Al Simmons, Cochrane has no hits in his last 11 times at bat. Simmons has made two in 16 trips to the plate.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Connie Mack and Pres dent Bob Allen of Knoxville of the Southern Association have agreed to play every day through Sunday instead of having two days of rest. Pinky Higgins three homers accounted for five of A's 11 runs and featured the opening appearance of the Mackmen yesterday.

Winter Haven, Fla.—President Nugent of the Phillies said today the club may seek a training camp a bit farther north next season, possibly in South Carolina, where less mild weather might prepare the team better to return to uncertain spring temperatures in the North.

Longview, Tex.—Big Bill Swift planned today to go seven innings against the White Sox in the second game of the Pirate series and "let Waite Hoyt finish up." Tommy Padden's homer kept the Pirates from a whitewashing yesterday as the Sox took the first game here.

Lakeland, Fla.—Outfielder Julius Solters of the Browns stayed here today while the rest of the team journeyed to Winter Haven, where the Phillies are entrenched. His ankle was injured in a slide Monday.

Bowl Early

Bowlaway Entrants Can Avoid Delays

Bowlers assigned late afternoon and evening times in the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser Bowlaway candlepin tourney can avoid delays by reporting in the early afternoon. Such time transfers will be allowed and entrants may thus save themselves time, and enjoy their bowling more.

With tremendous galleries watching the events, and hundreds of bowlers in action each night, the tourney is setting new attendance records.

CORUM Likes Sox TO WIN

By Bill Corum

New York, April 1—Once a year, and always on the same day, we pull this one out of a hat for which we originally paid five dollars and that has since cost us fifty-five in ransom to hat check girls, who always have a ready smile, a sick mother, and a healthy boy friend.

We couldn't tell you exactly why we pull it. But it seemed a good idea the first time. Since then it has been largely habit, we suppose. What we do is attempt to pick the winners of the major sports events of the coming season. Once or twice we have been remarkably right. Usually remarkably wrong.

If, however, you appreciate the opportunity to say, why you b.z stupid big, you said in April that Joe Louis would knock out Schmeling, this is your chance. For here I go again.

The two big league pennant races will finish as follows in 1936:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

1—Boston	5—St. Louis
2—Cleveland	6—Washington
3—New York	7—Chicago
4—Detroit	8—Philadelphia

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

1—St. Louis	5—Pittsburgh
2—Chicago	6—Philadelphia
3—Cincinnati	7—Brooklyn
4—New York	8—Boston

So now I'll have to wear whiskers every time I go to Brooklyn between now and the 4th of July. By that time the fans over there will have begun to realize that I probably am right, and will have stopped screaming up at the press-box

"Ya that crackpot Corum up there wit' yourse guys?"

I shall also have to stay out of Danny Healy's night club to keep that grand entertainer, Jack White, from chucking a tabis at me, not to mention the check, for placing Cincinnati ahead of the Giants.

The two teams really don't come together on paper (except the paper on which this is being typed), but I have one of those hunches on Powel Crosley, Jr's Radio and Refrigerator Ramblers. Undoubtedly they are air conditioned and tuned to the minute.

In every pennant race there is apt to be one team that gets out of hand and astonishes even itself, and in the National League this year, it could easily be Manager Charley Dressen's Reds. They are young and shot with hustle and hope, and I cotton to that type of team.

STARTS In Sprint FEATURE

WILSON NOW IN MARYLAND

By Dave Wilson

(Selections made for fast track)

BEST BET—BRIGHT HAVEN, FIFTH RACE

Bowie Race Track, Md., April 1—Bright Haven, champion sprinter of Florida racing, is accorded a standout preference in the $2500 added Inaugural Handicap, six furlongs feature on the opening day's sport of the 1936 Eastern season here today.

FIRST RACE

Drowsy, My Elsie, Malispina

DROWSY, running like a "wild horse" in training, needs only to race back to brilliant morning trials. Three furlongs in :36 breezing from the barrier went as a final convincer. MY ELSIE, on general Florida form, is strictly the home to fear. MALISPINA, a first-time starter from the Vanderbilt barn, for the remainder.

SECOND RACE

Big Red, Lativich, The Singer

BIG RED, trained to the letter of perfection, has only to run back to good Florida form. Concluded training with a breezing mile in 1.47. LATIVICH is credited with eight panels in 1.45 over this oval and comes highly recommended by the clocking fraternity. THE SINGER figures well on Western form.

THIRD RACE

Sang Froid, Dogmata, Portden

SANG FROID, ever partial to the Bowie strip, stepped six furlongs in 1.15 in preparation. DOGMATA, trained in private at the Vanderbilt farm and dropping a long way in class, will be hard to whip. PORTDEN merits high figures on best Hialeah races.

FOURTH RACE

Beth Bon, Bright and Early, Torita

String along with BETH BON in this affair. This filly trained exceptionally well and will be coming up fit. BRIGHT AND EARLY, an Oaklawn winner, holds plenty of class, and looms dangerous despite crushing impost of 120 pounds. TORITA can upset.

FIFTH RACE

Bright Haven, Singing Wood, Purple Knight

BRIGHT HAVEN merits a standout rating in my figures under the weight arrangements in this affair. Tapered off training with an easy six panels in 1:28. SINGING WOOD, with class, ran off three miles this morning, but will be all dangerous if started. PURPLE KNIGHT is reported to have trained exceptionally.

SIXTH RACE

Round Table, Fusco, Cachalot

ROUND TABLE is a very erratic sort, but best efforts entitle him to standout figures. FUSCO, a consistent Florida campaigner, should offer the opposition, with the rapidly improved CACHALOT saving the show award.

SEVENTH RACE

Silence 3rd, Dancing Cloud, Zembla

Anything can happen in this wide open affair. The winner may turn up in Philip Beiber's SILENCE 3RD. The latter compiled an enviable turf record at Hialeah last winter and has trained in a highly satisfactory manner for this test. DANCING CLOUD, fresh and good, has plenty of early foot and should hang on long enough to save the place from ZEMBLA. The latter is fond of the racing strip.

Tech Riflemen Win Hearst Shoot Honors

New Bedford High Tops Bangor

Washington, April 1—Major General Croft, chief of infantry, today issued the official return of the corps area champions in the 1935-36 Hearst rifle matches among R. O. T. C. units.

Yawkey Spending Seen at End If Sox Miss Pennant

Austen Lake

THE CONSENSUS OF GUESSING among the experts is that Tom Yawkey, the Red Sox philanthropist, will not win any pennants this year for his $4,000,000 and that, to attain his goal, he will have to peel off some more layers from his wad.

In my recent tours of the Southern training area, I found that the ball magnates, who operate their firms under the guise of civic monuments, equipped with silent cash registers or noiseless turnstiles, regard Yawkey in the same light that liesured Britishers scan a touring bathtub-millionaire from Wichita. And though the magnates, like the Britisher, will piecemeal their scruples at a fair price, or even sell shares in their souls, they contend that Yawkey's spending has rocketed the player prices and incited the athletes to selfish notions of their own worth.

This, the magnates say, tends to distract the player's thoughts from the national pastime, taints them with greed and sets them thinking about their bank accounts instead of the pure beauties of the game.

If Yawkey wished to pour out $4,000,000, the magnates complain, why did he not go and endow a college, with teams of unsalaried boys playing for board, room and glory. If properly promoted the colleges could be made to yield rich dividends from stadium games, with the educational end being operated as a wind, or false front for the athletic end.

But Yawkey did not wish to endow a college. He materialized his $4,000,000 in the form of a pennant, with numerical thousands screaming themselves hoarse and the newsmen conning their heads for new glory words to describe the finest band of ball players that money could afford.

He does not want any profits, merely asking that his plant be self-supporting, and contented to sit in his private roof-coop, rooting his side home with body English and little shudders of his diaphragm.

* * *

Sox the Team to Beat

THE REST OF THE CLUB OWNERS in the league deplore Yawkey's accent on wealth as likely to hurt the romantic illusions of the customers, or fans, as they would prefer to call them, because the word customer implies an ugly suggestion of sordid commercialism. Should Yawkey's team happen to overpower the other ball firms, the fans might ask why the magnates, who are always pleading for loyal support, do not take the safety pins off their pockets and spend for glory, as Yawkey does.

This would be embarrassing in such dead spots as St. Louis, Washington and Philadelphia, where some of the popular drawing cards, like Rick Ferrell, Tony Mellio, Joe Cronin, Heinie Manush, Lefty Grove, Jimmy Foxx and a dozen others were bartered for Yawkey's gold.

So, it is common gossip that the magnates of the league through their managers, are banding together to place every impediment in the path of the Red Sox this year. And I have heard Mickey Cochrane and Bucky Harris say it is mutually agreed that rival clubs will burn their best powder against Boston this season as the team to humiliate.

* * *

Evans as Stem to Golden Flow

THE TROUBLE IS, IF the Red Sox do not win a pennant now, some of the eldering players like Grove, Manush, Walburg, Miller, Cooke and Mellio, may grow a little too feeble to play prominent parts in later pennant hunts. And it is openly suspected in many quarters that some of them are too feeble now.

Such a team, like a storage battery, needs constant recharging and the annual outlay of more money. Which is why Billy Evans, the ex-umpire, literary light and former office-boss of the Indians, has been imported to comfort Eddie Collins and whisper pearls of wisdom in his ear about kid players in the mud-puddle leagues, concerning which Eddie, as a life-long major leaguer, has only perfunctory knowledge.

Evans' arrival is the first hint that Yawkey is wearying of shoveling up new millions for established stars and wishes to pay smaller sums for novice lads, plucked directly from the hayfields. And I doubt, if the Sox flunk their pennant this year, that Yawkey will ever again slice off large chunks from his wealth for any hero, however slightly shopworn.

And not the least of Tom's reasons for this change is his increasing tenderness to the impression that he is just a frolicsome spendthrift with a vast contempt for money. The time when he will unscrew the cap of his fountain pen and, without a tremor, scrawl a quarter-million check for one ball player, is gone forever. The era of economy is coming to Fenway.

Tom is down to his last thirty millions.

Four More Sox Rookies Go; Bill Werber's Job Unsafe

LINEUP Decided TODAY

CRONIN GETS IMPATIENT

By Joe Cashman

Sarasota, Fla., April 1—A big toe ache is giving Manager Joe Cronin a bigger headache.

And that's no April fool joke.

It may, however, be a season-long joke on Billy Werber, who happens to be the owner of the sore toe in question.

Washington Will, on the strength of his batting before he stubbed his toe, can start the season as the Red Sox regular third baseman, but only in the event that he is able and willing to play in the game against Newark this afternoon.

Our happy but not too healthful family, what with Marcum Foxx and Werber all on the hospital sound, was further reduced this morning.

Hardy had Dib Williams left camp after being optioned out to Syracuse subject to 24-hour recall, then Manager Cronin announced the release of rookies Chris Wiley Ripley of Marshfield and Bob Boyter of Quincy, Ill., and Catcher Joe D'Ambra.

The three youngsters with stages of service go to the Sox Piedmont league farm at Rocky Mount, N. C.

Can't Delay

"I can't delay another day in deciding on my starting infield," Cronin announced today. "I would like to have Werber at third and McNair at second, but I can't wait any longer for Bill.

"If he can't perform regularly, starting this afternoon, I'll put McNair at third and Mellio at second and keep them there until, if ever, something comes up in the pennant race to cause me to shift.

"It's imperative that I do this less than two weeks remain before the opening of the season I must decide on a lineup and stick to it through our remaining exhibition games if I hope to field a winning aggregation when the bell rings.

"This may be hard on Werber, if he's not yet ready. I know he can't help his injury. But there's no other way for me."

For Joe hope Werber [illegible] but he will [illegible] McNair at [illegible]

[illegible] are that Werber will get his berth when he is ready, which will be signified by Manager Mellio on the job.

Today's happenings will settle the Sox infield for the opening game, barring unforeseen injuries.

The concensus among the squad is that Werber will play and be ready in time. This belief is based on Bill's antics in yesterday's practice session.

"I'll be in there today, though, if I can stand up. I want that job. And I realize that they can't wait for me any longer."

Sour Note

The one sour note of the Boston College spring football practice to date has been the absence of Fella Gintoff, one of the most promising backs in years at the Heights, who may be lost for the entire spring season because of an injured side.

John Stephenson and his seven-year-old son, Junior, are shown just before they started bowling in the big Boston Evening American Sunday Advertiser bowling tournament at the Twentieth Century.

Baltimore, Apr[illegible] The Harvard lacrosse team completed its southern tour today after an overwhelming victory scored against them by the Mt. Washington Club composed of former collegians. The score was 19-4.

A real champion. Seven-year-old Johnny Stephenson, Jr., of 81 Eustis street, Roxbury, bowling in the "rollaway" yesterday bowled 217. One of his strings was 81 which is little short of remarkable. His dad rolled 273. He is the youngest boy in the tourney and from his showing yesterday he will be a definite contender for a big prize in a few years.

Mr. Boston LEONARD Talks With SHARKEY

By Jack Conway

BENNY Leonard was talking with Jack Sharkey in the latter's dressing room at Buckley's Gym. Sharkey had just completed boxing two rounds with Don Petrin as part of his training routine for his ten-round bout with Tony Shucco at the Garden on April 14.

"I'll tell you why you decided to stage a comeback," Leonard told Sharkey. "You were governed by your subconscious mind. You have been watching the various heavyweights in action, and the more you saw them the more convinced you became that you could beat them.

"Then a promoter came along and offered you money to fight. You think you said 'yes' because you were placed in a position to earn more money, but it was the thought way back in your mind that you can beat any of the heavyweights you have seen that really sent you back into the ring."

Leonard also told Sharkey a condition.

"You look to be in good condition," Benny told Jack. "At your age you should fight frequently. You will find it much easier to keep in condition if you avoid long layoffs. If you have a bout each month you will be able to get into condition without much effort."

Now Manager

LEONARD told me he had failed by become a manager of a boxer. The youngster I have in mind is Billy Dunne, and he is a lulu.

"I have always passed up opportunities to become manager of a boxer," said Leonard. "Boxers as a class are an unreliable lot, and don't appreciate what you do for them. I make this statement even though I tossed leather myself for a great many years.

"Arthur Donovan came to me recently and asked me to take over the management of Dunne. I finally consented to do so, and I am glad I did. I have found Dunne, who is an Irish-American boy, an excellent student of boxing. He tries every punch I ask him to throw, and he has been very successful.

"Dunne is a fine boy personally, and maybe he will help me to change my opinion of boxers."

Sharkey and Leonard then told Joe Louis will be a cinch for Schmeling, but that his big figure Jimmy Braddock will give the "Brown Bomber" more trouble. Leonard even said Louis' boxing skill will enable him to outpoint Louis whom he considered a "inexperienced boxer."

"You know I am now married," Leonard said to me. "I never considered matrimony while my mother was alive, but after she died I decided to get married. I have been very happy, and have some regrets that I didn't get married earlier in life."

Don Petrin

DON Petrin, who will help get Sharkey ready for his bout with Shucco, worked with Max Schmeling while the latter trained for his first tussle with Sharkey. It was the bout that gave Schmeling the heavyweight championship of the world which he held until Sharkey in a return go two years later.

"I also helped get Mickey Walker into condition for his bout with Sharkey," said Petrin "I weigh 185 pounds and am six feet one inch tall, I shall make Sharkey step lively every second he is in the ring."

Sharkey took a hard left hand punch to the nose while training. His nose bled for the first time in his fistic career, but he held it down and gave a fine exhibition of boxing.

Petrin will bring out the real Sharkey," said the former heavyweight champion. "I shall have to extend myself every time I meet him in the ring. This should mean I shall be in the best possible condition when I clash with Shucco. In such an event, I shall win by a knockout."

Don George

ED DON George is one of the few heavyweight wrestlers who have been able to match strength with Danno O'Mahoney. George's power, plus his versatile wrestling ability, will give him an excellent chance to win from O'Mahoney in their world a championship bout at the Garden on Friday night.

I saw the last bout between George and O'Mahony. It was held in the New York Garden. There were several occasions during the contest when I thought Referee George Bothner was going to award George a fall. Don had the Irishman in distress half a dozen times.

George has prepared himself carefully for the championship meeting. He will be well rested when he enters the ring, and will be able to set a furious pace from the start.

BADMEN Tangle at ARENA

STRACK VS. HAGEN

Wesley Ira "Cyclone" George K. O. Kennedy, the California "Cave man," and one of the foremost "bad men" wrestling ranks today at the Boston Arena when he meets Gerhard "Dynamite" Strack in the main bout of Alex MacLean's sparring series.

Kennedy has appeared here several times in the past and, if memory serves us right, a throw-back to the days of the fittest survived. He has decided all who saw him in action by his almost inhuman methods and tonight submits a challenge to any mat artist in the country to meet him in a finish match.

Strack, the toughest, toughest wrestler I have ever seen," by Al Mc[illegible], a very fine judge of wrestling flesh, Koverly clashes with Washburn, considered the "toughest of the bad men" until now, in a two out of three falls match which may wind up with one or both being rushed to the hospital in a body.

FORMER FIGHTER

Another fast wrestler, Koverly has a habit of becoming Jack Dempsey in the ring. Koverly packs a punch in each hand and has won many an out of the picture by a long count. Caught with a punch he does not know well doesn't hesitate to turn boxer to decide almost entirely upon the result of to-night's bout.

If Koverly wins, and he'll be a favorite, he'll go gunning for Dan O'Mahoney, Ken Robert and other top-flight wrestlers. Experts think Koverly has the right amount of wrestling ability, physical dimensions and color to attract. They figure he'll be primed to beat Dan O'Mahoney, Ed Don George, Robert Managoff and other front-runners within a year or two, who has proved nothing short of a sensation here.

In the semi-final will be Charlie Strack and Hagen, who in recent bouts Herman Olson will meet a human jumping jack, Tommy Rae, and Steve Brady will tackle the octopus hold expert, Angelo Castoldi.

Pre-matches will be Leo Hyatt vs. Charlie Welsh, Boris Demetroff vs. Joe Marucci, newcomer to the Arena, and Chief Little Moon, Cherokee vs. Joe Allario, ever-irate Italian. It shapes up as one of the best cards of the season, and we're with you, matched and ready.

Dot Wightman In Tennis Final

Finals in the double matches of the junior girls' championship tournament at the Country Club went on today with Dorothy Wightman and Babs Madden opposing Katherine Hubbell and Babe Madden.

Miss Wightman annexed the junior crown by defeating Miss Hubbell, 4—6, 6—1, 6—2.

BOY, 16, Eliminates OUIMET

Pinehurst, N. C., April 1 (US)—An incredible upset of Francis Ouimet of Cape Cod, Mass., former national amateur and open title holder, by Bobby Dunkelberger, 16-year-old schoolboy of High Point, N. C., marked the play in the first round of the North and South amateur golf championship.

After 17 holes of neck-and-neck match play Ouimet was one down to Dunky on the 18th tee. His drive was slightly pushed to the right and Dunky landed in the middle of the fairway ten yards ahead.

Ouimet's second was a high left of the pin on the edge of the green, and Dunky was past the pin on his second. Ouimet's long putt for a par 4 narrowly missed and Dunky put the next putt into the cup.

Another upset came when Ben Friedman, the Tuscaloosa 20-year-old University of Alabama boy, was beaten by W. E. Stockhausen of New York, 3-1 George T. Dunlap, Jr., defending champion, defeated W. Todd Jr. of Durham, N. C., 6-4.

Play continues today with 16 in the field.

Dengis Enters Marathon

With the annual B. A. A. Marathon less than three weeks away, Manager Tom Kanaly released the first batch of entries.

Pat Dengis of Baltimore was the first to sign up but he will carry No. 2 marker since Kanaly is distributing numbers in the order the entries finished last year. Dengis followed Johnny Kelley across the finish line.

Other entries included Fred Ward of New York, Anthony Paskell of West Lynn, Cecil Hall of United Shoe, Christopher Rolekos of Osterville, and Robert Breed of Amherst.

POLOWSKI-DUSEK ON GARDEN MAT BILL

PRELIM CARD SET FOR FRIDAY

One of the strongest supporting cards of the season will back Friday night's battle between Danno O'Mahoney and Ed Don George for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship at Boston Garden.

Promoter Paul Bowser a few days ago closed with Rudy Dusek to collide with Count Casimir Polowski in the semi-final.

It was Polowski, who substituted for Gus Sonnenberg, and knocked off Dusek in fast time a year ago.

That match skyrocketed the Count into a big drawing card and put Dusek out of commission for several months. Recently Dusek started a comeback and he asked Bowser for another crack at Polowski.

There will be seven preliminaries in addition to the headline Sour and semi-final. Nick Lutze, beater by O'Mahony and Robert in two tough battles, will start a comeback and has drawn the rugged Bibber McCoy as an opponent.

Jack Washburn, the rough and tough Californian, will take on an opponent just as rough in Boris Demetroff. Carlo Stringari, recent Italian importation via France who has registered two straight local victories, although he has been in this country but two weeks, will be given a real test. He is paired with Charley Strack, another rough house performer.

Joe Narochi, a newcomer from New York, is paired with Arthur LeGrand, French Canadian, and Yvon Robert's sparring mate; John Spellman, former Brown University athletic star, takes on Henry Piers the clever Hollander, and Rudy Le Ouzi, a local favorite recently returned to local wrestling wars, opposes the clever Tommy Rae in other supporting bouts.

LEAFS Beaten by JERWA

Joe Jerwa the former Bruin and Cub defense star, who was tossed in for good measure when Nels Stewart was sold down the river, knocked the Maple Leafs back on their heels last night, by scoring the lone goal of the Americans-Toronto game in New York.

Although he was not rated good enough for the Bruins, Joe Jerwa has starred with the Americans this season, during which he was one of the highest-scoring defense men in the N. H. L.

The Jerwa goal equalized the series and the third and final game will be played in Toronto tomorrow night. The winner will challenge the Red Wings for the Stanley Cup, in a best three-out-of-five series.

Late in the second period, with both clubs going a man shy, Art Chapman, another ex-Bruin, who had done all right by himself since he was sold to New York, broke out of his own zone.

Andy Blair was the only protection offered George Hainsworth and he proved a setup for "Chapman," who was flanked by "Sweeney" Schriner and Joe Jerwa. Chapman passed to Schriner and while these two high-scoring Americ were completing the play, Jerwa slipped into scoring position, took the relayed pass and tallied.

Novice Classes at Irish Bouts

The Irish American A. A. marches on, next Monday night at the Boston Arena, with another of their weekly "fighting shows" offering competition in six classes.

The following weights will be contested—open classes at 118 lbs., 135 lbs., 160 lbs., and heavyweights, and novice classes at 126 lbs., and 147 lbs.

In order to develop more new material in this section, the I. A. A. A. will put on at each of their Monday nights shows one or two classes for novices. Several times during the past season the Irish American A. A. has staged novice competition, with the result that many fine looking prospects have been uncovered.

Walberg Due For Comeback | Screw Ball Is Baffling

By JIMMY FOXX

Sarasota, Fla., April 1—Robert Moses Grove made the most remarkable comeback of the 1935 season.

And it wouldn't surprise me in the least if another of the Athletics' alumni with the Red Sox furnished the big rejuvenation news of the coming campaign.

I'm thinking of my good pal, George "Rube" Walberg as fine a character and as willing a worker, as I've ever met in baseball.

I don't imagine many fans or critics are looking for "Rubinoff", to be of much help to the Sox this year. That's natural. The big Swede will soon celebrate his 37th birthday, which is extremely old, in baseball, he's starting his 15th season in the majors and he won but five games last year.

On the surface he would appear to be about washed up.

HAD 17 WINS

Yet those of us on the club who know "Rube" intimately are banking on him having his best and first winning year since 1932 when he turned in 17 victories for the A's.

We base our faith on a screwball the veteran has developed. He's been next to invincible in the every appearance on the mound so far this spring. He tells us, but doesn't need to, that the answer is his new delivery.

If the veteran has as much success in controlling the pitch and baffling opponents with it during the race as he is having down here, I'm betting his record will be the big surprise and sensation of the season.

And I hardly need remind you that we should have that old pennant just about sewed up in July if "Rube" proves a consistent winner along with Grove, Ferrell, Marcum and Ostermueller.

"Reuben" started experimenting with his screw ball, which is sort of a fast fadeaway, early last season. He threw it often in batting practice and stood his mates on their heads.

But he could never be persuaded to rely on it as a life-saver in a game. He felt he hadn't mastered it well enough.

This Spring, however, he's used it regularly as his ace in the hole and I haven't seen him looking more effective since his palmiest days with the A's when he had as much stuff as any pitcher I ever looked at.

While we were in Clearwater the day before yesterday, several Dodgers told me they looked for George Earnshaw to be the best pitcher in the National League this year.

Big "Moose" is better than he ever was as an Athletic, in their opinion.

It would be strange wouldn't it, if Earnshaw and Walberg gained the outstanding comebacks of 1936 after Grove turning the trick last year."

If they do it will certainly be proof of my contention that Mc[illegible], "Rube" and Mack were the three best pitchers in the A's, or any [illegible] pitchers.

Good luck. We open a part of our training season with Newark today and I'll be with them against the Chicago Cubs on our final Sarasota tilt tomorrow.

I don't envy the Bees or Braves, believe me.

The Grove was so low during its batting practice that I feared he'd had another injury recurrence but I love my curves as well as the next guy but I don't get any a out of seeing the ball and that's all one does when Moose is bear down as he was on this occasion. Earnshaw and Walberg were when Grove and Ferrell start in w[illegible] does during the early days of the race.

'TWIXT TEE AND CUP

By BILL GRIMES

After seven years of faithful and efficient service, Fred Alden has resigned as chairman of the greens committee of the South Shore Country Club . . . But for Fred Alden, in all probability, the popular West Hingham club would have finished in the "red," instead of the black, during the depression years . . . George Perry will succeed Alden as the head of the greens committee, which is a break for South Shore . . .

The Marshfield Country Club is almost in mid-season condition . . . Hundreds of golfers have played Marshfield this spring and are amazed at the playing conditions . . . President Henry H. Lynch predicts a banner season and states that the club is seriously considering piping the course . . .

Noone May Be Caddy Master at Oakley

It's rumored that Joe Noone formerly at the Oakley Country Club, will act as caddy master in Winchester . . . Noone has had years of experience in golf and should prove an ideal addition to Winchester.

Charlie Smart, who was at Miami from last November until this week, is having difficulty arranging matches at South Shore . . . The boys are trying to get strokes but Charlie has turned a deaf ear to the pairing talks . . . Dan Shea, Jr., will captain the South Shore Metropolitan Four Ball League team . . . Eddie Murphy, formerly of Charles River, will probably play for South Shore this season.

Homer Anderson, who was the pro at Woods Hole last season, will assist Rolan Wingate at the Country Club . . . Basil Smith has been selected to succeed Charlie Pinkelow as caddy master at Brookline . . . Al Fidel Gould of Lenox, a graduate of Georgetown University, will be in the shop at the Country Club, with Jack Simpson, the club maker . . . Charlie Dukelow is now connected with a well known golf ball concern and will cover Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont . . .

Hart Seeks N. U. Mound Job

Jay Hart, captain-elect of the N. U. football eleven, who has already played at second, third, short, and in the outfield, has become a candidate for the mound corps of Coach Al McCoy's nine.

Because McCoy is badly in need of good pitching material, and because Hart throws a "fire-ball," the strapping lad from Hackettstown, N. J., will now confine his activities to twirling.

Joe Chrus, this year's grid captain, also a Hackettstown native, set the precedent last spring, when he changed from pasture patroling to ball-tossing.

Mat Results

New Haven—Abe Coleman, 205, New York, threw Emil Dusek, 214, Omaha, in second and third falls of feature match. Referee Bill Slatchley taken to mat following award of decision, Ed Meaker, 218, Akron, tossed Jim Wallis, 216, Boston, in 18:34.

VICTORS In Epic TOURNEY

SECOND DAY WINNERS

A new tournament candlepin record was chalked up in the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser Bowling Contest when William Butts of 30 Minot street, Dorchester, splattered the ashen pins for a three-string total of 388.

Butts registered 123, 128, 137 for his three-string effort. This mark was one pin short of the National Candlepin Tournament record.

By virtue of his sensational three-string total, Butts assumed the lead in the American-Advertiser contest.

'BOWLAWAY' ENTRY LIST

The Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser "Bowlaway" reached the first quarter today shattering crowd and enthusiasm records right and left.

In order to be certain of competing, entrants should be at the 20th Century Alleys at least 15 minutes before they are to bowl. The clerk, of course, will check them in officially on the fifth floor at 83 Summer street.

If there is any doubt as to alley or starting time a telephone call to Ming Louise Hamilton at Hubbard 2440 will bring the required information.

Herewith is a list of entries and starting times for today and tomorrow

Princeton, N. J., April 1—The Princetons today were well on the way to recognition as the "Winless Wonders" after receiving their third straight baseball setback.

Visitors this time were the Williams bludgeon kings who pounded out 17 hits in defeating the Benjamin 17 to 10 at University Field.

New England Police Stories

3 Questions Save Him From Chair

This is the 57th in a series of true detective stories from New England police annals being presented daily by the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Fred Perkins, one of the ace reporters for the American and Sunday Advertiser, relates this gripping story of "The Death Rendezvous."

Other stories in the series will be writen by reporters whose by-lines are equally familiar throughout New England.

By FRED PERKINS

He may, or may not, have killed the girl—but nobody has claimed he didn't love her!

And if, in truth, 23-year-old Joseph Foster Buckley and his invalid sweetheart, Grace Mills of Waltham, really went together to a pre-arranged rendezvous with death, it wasn't Buckley's fault he failed to keep his part of the alleged suicide agreement.

In the gray dawn of November 16, 1927, with the girl's lifeless body huddled at his elbow, he drove his rusty and battered little roadster to Main and Rich streets, Waltham, kissed his sweetheart's dead lips—then pressed a gun to his own breast and pulled the trigger!

Passers-by, brought hurrying to the scene by the sound of the shot, found Buckley sprawled on the running board of his car, apparently breathing his last.

He managed to gasp a few inco herent words which sounded to one excited listener like

"shot herself . . . suffering . . . I shot her!"

Very plain, in any event, was the fact that the young man was in no condition to talk

Patrolman Asa McKenna, arriving to take charge of the case, dispatched Buckley to the Waltham hospital—but expected he'd die before he got there

By Half Inch

Hospital surgeons, in their turn also thought that the wound would be fatal. But the bullet had missed the heart by a scanty half-inch, as subsequent X-ray examinations were to disclose.

Thanks to youth and a naturally robust constitution, Buckley finally recovered

By saving his life, doctors deprived newspaper sob-sisters of an opportunity to write effectively tearful stories of sweethearts, separated in this world, being joined in the next.

And these same doctors, having foiled Buckley's suicide attempt, presented Middlesex county authorities with a difficult problem, that of determining what crime, if any had been committed by the youth

Like many an immortal character in romantic literature, Buckley had loved too well—and fac from wisely!

This was apparent almost from the first to official investigators

On general principles they charged the young man with murder. But, to prove him guilty before a jury, they needed a lot more evidence than seemed immediately available

Grace Mills couldn't testify She had been dead, according to the medical examiner, for at least two hours before Buckley, at the behest of his red-eyed, blue-striped second-hand flivver, had driven up to the Waltham corner where he had attempted to put himself beyond all human punishment or sympathy.

There was no witness except Buckley—to say how the girl had met her death

It was on Buckley's own alleged story, told at the hospital, that the murder warrant against him was obtained on the day following the double shooting.

Police said that the suffering he, believing himself about to die, whispered to Inspector J. Tracey a dramatic tale of frustrated love and of a suicide pact

'Confession'

According to Tracey's sworn statement, given later in court, the "confession" was recorded in question and answer form and was in part as follows

Q—Now, Joe, do you know that there is no hope of your recovery? A—I know I am going to die.

Q—When was the first time there was any talk about shooting? A—The afternoon before we went out.

Q—Who first started to talk about shooting at any time A—I guess I did.

Q—When you left Waltham, where did you go then? A—About 15 miles from Waltham toward Marlboro.

Q—And was it there that the girl was shot? A—Yes.

Q—Who shot her? A—She did

Q—What did she do, after firing the shot? A—She said, "Please, please," and I picked the revolver up and shot her again

Q—Did you promise her if she shot herself that you would shoot yourself? A—I did

Q—And when did you shoot yourself, and where did you shoot yourself? A—And then when I got back to Waltham I shot myself.

Q—Did you know that Grace was dead when you shot yourself" A—Yes

From information obtained from them by Buckley, the police took views at the hospital, police me completely reconstructed what they said was the accused youth's version of the tragedy.

According to the officers, Buckley admitted the double suicide had been planned at Grace Mills' home on the afternoon before the shooting.

Rendezvous

As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

Principal in "Suicide Pact"

GRACE MILLS

Incurable

The girl had told Buckley that there seemed no hope that they could ever marry. Her family opposed the match. She was suffering from an incurable form of ailment Buckley had no money

"We were both discouraged," Buckley said "We decided that if we could live together, we would die together

"Grace slept on a sort of screened porch at the front of her house. She promised that she would pretend to go to bed, but would dress and slip away at midnight and meet me at the old mill on South street

"I was afraid she would lose her nerve and wouldn't come. She took off her bracelet and gave it to me as a pledge that she would keep her promise

"She came to the mill as she had promised. I was there before her. I came at one minute past 12 o'clock

"She told me, 'If you hadn't come pretty quick, I was going to jump into the pond and end everything right now.'

"While we were riding, Grace kept telling me about other people who had killed themselves.

"She told me about a man who had been found dead in a barn where he had sat in the seat of his automobile with the engine running

"Then she asked me if I had got the gun I said yes, and I showed it to her

"She looked at it and said she thought it was pretty small. She said: 'Why, that little thing wouldn't kill a rabbit."

Gun Jams

She wanted me to see if it would work all right. I tried to fork it but it jammed. I lit a match, and I could see there were two cartridges in the space back of the chamber. I dug one out with the blade of my jackknife

"Then, with the gun pointing down at the floor of the car, I pulled the trigger and fired one shot. Where we were I'm going to do the shooting, we got out of the automobile and we both took off our hats. There we got to arguing about who was to kill who, and, finally, we got back into the machine and rode a while longer.

"I hated to do it, but I finally took the gun from her hand and fired a second shot at where I thought her heart was

"She crumpled over sideways again. I straightened her up, and then I drove around and around, not knowing what to do, whether to tell the police or to shoot myself and have it over with

"Then I came into Waltham. I thought I had better use the gun, as we had planned I stopped the car and got out

"I walked up and down the sidewalk for what seemed a long while, watching a few men go by on their way to work

"I sat down again beside her, and, before I knew what she was doing, she took the gun where I had left on the seat and put it against her and fired

"She sort of slumped against me and she kept moaning and saying: 'Please, Buster, please Oh, end it, Buster—it hurts awfully.'

Then I [illegible] before I could get to thinking again and I put it [illegible]

Such [illegible] Buck- [illegible] sweetheart were looking [illegible] they had reason, doctors admitted, to be discouraged.

When the Buckley case came to trial however, Grace Mills' motive, or lack of motive, for suicide wasn't the issue which the prosecution must necessarily consider vital

By Massachusetts statute, "suicide pacts are criminal. Two persons agreeing to die together are accessories before the fact of intended homicide, and, if one of them alone survives, that one may be tried for murder in the first degree murder under certain circumstances

A jury judge and jury, in February 1927, with the shadow of the electric chair dark upon him, Buckley couldn't leave himself with the story that he was alleged to have told at the hospital

'Mercy' Shot

If he said now that he had deliberately fired a "mercy" shot to put Grace Mills out of pain, he was confessing himself legally a murderer.

Prosecutor Bushnell branded him as an unconscionless killer, impelled by cowardice and determined that, if he couldn't have Grace Mills, no one else would have her

The [illegible] loved the girl, Bushnell declared. But the district attorney did not [illegible] to be suspicious of the degree to which the girl reciprocated this love. He said that it mattered little whether neither of the shots to have been fired by the victim, herself

"Buckley intended to kill her. There to kill her—and he did kill her," Bushnell thundered.

Buckley himself said he had his answer. He declared it me t emphatically, in person to the judges charge. [illegible] of the prosecution he said

"Mr Foreman and Gentlemen: I love Grace Mills and I love her now As God above is my judge, I did not kill her!"

[illegible] his testimony, Buckley completely repudiated the [illegible] and mercy shot confession. Grace Mills, he said, clutched the gun in about warning and said herself before he could reach her. The second shot, he swore was fired accidentally as he was wresting the pistol from the girl's grasp

[illegible] through- [illegible] examination, than he said shown when he was telling his story to Inspector Tracey

[illegible] asked Attorney Bushnell [illegible] to ask a few questions

"I'll ask three questions! [illegible] [illegible] second de- [illegible] and [illegible] impression [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Entombed Alive

Adventurer's Terrible Experience On Ill-Fated Ship

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Remember that poem of Kipling's, "Gunga Din?" Well sir, here's the 1917 version of it. Gunga Din was a water boy in some war that happened a long time ago over in India, but Richard Harrington of New York City, was a water boy during the World War, and thereby hangs a tale—the big adventure tale of the day, as a matter of fact.

Now they didn't have water boys in the front line trenches in the World War, but they did have them in Cardiff, Wales, where the coal for the Allied Navies was brought in trainloads and piled into the holds of the big, grimy colliers that supplied the fleets.

Dick Harrington, at the age of 14, was doing his bit by carrying water to the coal trimmers—the men who went down into the holds of the ships and leveled off the coal as it poured down through the hatches.

That coal came tumbling down into the hold out of huge electric "tips" that carried ten tons at a time. When one of those big loads came roaring down, the trimmers had to work like the very devil to get it all leveled off and pushed into the odd corners before the next one came along.

And sometimes, when he had nothing else to do, Dick used to go down into the hold and help out. The men liked to have him down there because he was small and could work in corners that none of the others could even get into. Every payday, they used to give him a couple of extra "bob" for that sort of assistance.

One wet, rainy night, young Dick went down into the hold of a boat they were coaling, to give the men a hand. The ship was the H. M. S. Milly, and they were working like madmen to get her filled in time to make the morning tide. The coal was almost to the top of the hold—the job almost done—when Dick, pushing his shovel ahead of him, worked his way under the deck to the side of the ship and began filling in empty spaces.

He shoveled away for about ten minutes, but no matter how fast he worked, coal kept piling up behind him. They were feeding it in with the big electric "tip" a bit faster than usual, for the tide was coming in, and time was getting short. Dick thought nothing of that—not at first, he didn't. But suddenly an extra large quantity of coal came sliding down on him, covering up his legs.

Still Dick wasn't worried. Things like a coal slide often happened. But then he began hearing sounds of a great commotion on deck, and that set him to wondering what the hullabaloo was all about.

"It didn't take long to find out," he says. "I tried to back out of the corner I was in, and to my horror found I couldn't retreat an inch. There I was, in a space three feet high, with a steel deck an inch thick over my head, and coal on every other side—entombed alive! It was then that I realized what the commotion on deck had meant. They had dropped one more box of coal than they should have.

"Immediately, I got panicky—started scratching at the coal with my hands in an effort to get out. I succeeded in losing nearly all my finger-nails, but that was all. My candle was still burning—eating up what little oxygen there was left, but I didn't know enough to put it out. A million questions were going through my mind. How long would it be before I suffocated? Would they ever find me down there? Did they realize I was down there at all? Would the ship sail with my dead body lying right there on top of the coal?"

Dick doesn't remember what he did after that. He thinks he must have gone completely insane for a spell. It was a loud, insistent tapping that finally brought him back to his senses. The tapping came nearer and nearer. Then, suddenly Dick realized what it was. A signal! The men up on deck were trying to locate him.

Dick picked up a piece of coal and began pounding with all his might on the underside of the deck—returning the signal. He heard heavy footsteps above him—strange noises on the upper-side of the deck. He was getting very sleepy, but he fought the drowsiness off. He knew that it came from lack of air—and that once he gave way to it he might never wake up again. He picked up another lump of coal and pounded again. An answering tap reassured him.

Then suddenly, inexplicably, light shot through the top of the deck. A streak of flame almost burned his shoulder. He crouched back in the far end of his tomb while an acetylene torch ate through the steel that confined him. In another five minutes they had cut a hole big enough to crawl through, and he was out again.

"They gave me a stiff drink of brandy," Dick says, "and after that I didn't feel so badly—except for my bruised fingers and an ache in my lungs from the fumes of the candle. All in all, it was a good thing I didn't stay down there and go to sea with the ship. She made the tide and, while traversing the famous "Death Route"—Bristol Channel to France—she was torpedoed and lost with all hands except for one man."

Well, Dick, you'd only have been torpedoed once. I get torpedoed every day by some guy with a regular depth bomb of an adventure story. And how I love it. I want every one of you boys and girls to send me a yarn—and right now, too.

Tomorrow I'm going to tell you Bernice Forsythe's story of the serpent that was too big to be true.

Floyd Gibbons wants to hear from you. The greatest adventuring newspaper man of modern times invites you to tell him about YOUR greatest adventure. He contends that everyone has had at least one big thrill that other people would like to hear about, and he is building a great adventurers' organization around that idea. For every story you send him that is printed in the column at the left, Floyd will pay you ten dollars. And there's a hundred dollar prize for the best story of the month.

HOLLAND 'AL WOODS' Comeback One of Broadway's Thrills

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Broadway's favorite comeback the past season was that of Al Woods. Both the comeback and its sentimental reception were events.

From the days of Sullivan, Harris and Woods, when the name Al was partner of "Tim" Sullivan and Sam H. Harris and Woods was one of the wealthiest producers on New York's theatrical row, his office a hive of activity.

The depression, Lincoln Beachey, Lindbergh and Hauptmann all to do with his safe-deposit box, fattened Mr. Woods. He stayed down for several seasons. Last summer he announced that he would resist the producing lists in the fall. That was after he had chanced upon a manuscript titled "Night of January 16."

Ayn Rand was the name of the author, but Mr. Woods is one of those few producers capable of contributing to a writer's handiwork without taking a slice of the royalties), and the veteran showman thought up the idea that the play, a courtroom drama, should have a cast partly selected from the audience.

He decided that the trial in "Night of January 16" should be conducted before a jury selected each night from the paying customers. This novelty proved very exciting in New York. The play ran eight months. It opens at the Shubert a week from Saturday night, and as in New York, the jurors each night will be chosen from the audience.

Getting back to the Woods comeback. Several of the chief names of the theater determined last spring and summer to refer the producing field to Mr. Woods. Gest, Arthur Hammerstein, Jed Harris and Archie Selwyn were some of them. Mr. Gest based his comeback on a Chinese fantasy, "Lady Precious Stream." He has not fared well. Jed Harris produced a depressing failure. Messrs. Hammerstein and Selwyn have not been heard from among Broadway's best. Mr. Selwyn is now associated with a representative in Hollywood.

* * *

Thus Al Woods' return has been the sole success among his erstwhile mates of the producing-managers' association. It is predictable that, his fortune on the climb again, Mr. Woods will be making those semi-monthly trips to London and Paris. After he returned from London he told the shipnews reporters he had returned with 80 [illegible] of plays, net.

Missing only from the ranks of Al Woods is the absence of the poetic soft-spoken Sam Harrison. He was Sam who by the legend that he is world player was the most successful man on Broadway. Hearing the pronouncement, fairy-like, from the Woods' office in the Lyric Theater, Epes Winthrop Sargent once would declare: "Sam H. Woods breaks bad with his policies, lunched with pretty girls and dined with Shakespeare."

* * *

This was too much for the [illegible] ture. Al Woods was always loyal to the dialect of his native East Side. He began business relations with "listen, sweetheart," and for direct [illegible] turesque speech he was [illegible] And where is the poetic Mr. Hoffenstein?

He is writing [illegible]. Hollywood.

Hollywood Notes

Chatter in Hollywood: Ruth Chatterton, piloting her own plane with her mother and her maid as passengers left New York Ruth is the only woman pilot among the film [illegible] and she handles her part with the skill of a veteran. She remains in the East two weeks planning to see the play which she herself may do on the stage. However, it is more than likely she will come back and make a picture for Paramount before she starts "Dodsworth."

Edmund Lowe won't linger in New York very long. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has a script all ready for him. "We Went To College," an original authored by George Oppenheimer and Florey Peter Dunne, Jr., and they are eager to have it on the screen and released. Bette Davis Stars in 'Mountain Justice'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Los Angeles, April 1.—The whole Warner scenario department has been reading and writing like mad to get the right dramtic story for their academy prize-winner, Betty Davis. Jack Warner said today he felt he had found it in "Mountain Justice."

It is an original story by Luel Ward based on the recent headline story of the young schoolteacher who killed her father after he struck her for returning home at what he considered an improper hour.

Miss Davis, who has been visiting in New York, returned home several weeks sooner than she expected and will be here April 11 to discuss the role. Norma Rose Raine whose "Jezebel" has been engaged to write the screen play.

Louella O. Parsons

"The Garden of Allah" switch in story names just as simple as it sounds. Merle Oberon, through her attorney, has notified David Selznick that she will not wait for Paramount to offer her a compromise on the Garden of Allah," and that she expects to be paid for one picture since she has waited eight months for her Selznick contract to start. The trouble is the result of the announcement by young Mr. Selznick that Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer would be co-starred in "The Garden of Allah," originally announced for Merle. Meanwhile, several producers, hearing of the difficulty, have submitted scripts for Miss Oberon's consideration and she is now reading them before she makes any new plans.

Toby Wing, the girl who received more publicity than many important stars without ever playing more than bits, is going to appear in a movie for Hal Roach. When Toby was engaged to Jackie Coogan she was good newspaper copy and later, when she appeared here and there with other well known people, she continued to intrigue the interest of [illegible] writers. Now Toby, who [illegible] the East making personal appearances, has signed to appear in "Mr. Cinderella" opposite Jack Haley. She is almost the first player, with the exception of Paulette Goddard, to have a movie audience waiting to receive her.

Gregory Ratoff, who has been spending all of his salary and more besides to be wife, Eugenie Leontovich in London, has decided there's no use in prolonging the separation. He is leaving immediately to join her, Gregory, who started his motion picture career a few years ago with a toughing death scene in "Svengali," a la Maurice," said farewell to his screen career in a similar death scene in "The Road to Glory." He is now going to direct and write which he will for 20th Century Fox as soon as he returns from London.

Snapshots of Hollywood

ETHEL SYKES at various night spots with [illegible] could never guess. WINFIELD SHEEHAN back from New York with a [illegible] Paramount deal definitely off with little chance of it ever being revived. MRS. SHEEHAN (MARIA JERITZA) off for the SHEEHAN ranch as soon as she arrived in town, to supervise building on the place. PAT and CHARLES ROYER entertaining with one of the nicest affairs of the season, a big ping pong game with IRVING THALBERG and DAVID SELZNICK as contestants, with several side bets made. GINGER ROGERS also a ping pong player; others danced and played poker: RONALD COLMAN escorting BENITA HUME; MERLE OBERON with DAVID NIVEN; NORMA SHEARER, the FREDRIC MARCHES, GLORIA SWANSON, HERBERT MARSHALL, MYRNA LOY and just about everyone making merry.

ANTON LITVAK at the party with WALTER WANGER receiving congratulations on his French picture, "Mayerling," starring BOYER; everyone glad to see RUTH JONES, secretary to EDDIE SELZER, Warner publicity head, back at her desk after an absence of months caused by an automobile accident; MRS. ARTHUR HORNBLOW leaving this week for Reno to establish residence; the JOHN CONSIDINES opening their new tennis court with a party; JOAN CRAWFORD with a single fresh red carnations and a red dress at her formal dinner party; floral coiffures seem to be all the rage among the movie crowd.

Specializes in Secrets

OTTO KRUGER RUTH CHATTERTON

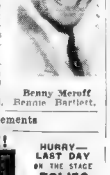
Ruth Chatterton's latest film, "Lady of Secrets," will have its Boston premiere on the Loew's Orpheum screen on Friday. In this scene from the film Ruth and Otto Kruger are evidently discussing one of the secrets over a cocktail.

Benny Meroff Brings His Band to Met Stage

"Thirteen Hours by Air," a film comedy-drama, and Benny Meroff's Broadway musical comedy featuring his famous band will be the attractions at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning Friday.

The screen attraction stars Fred MacMurray and Joan Bennett. Its action takes place for the most part aboard a transcontinental passenger plane. Fred MacMurray is seen as an ace pilot who flies the plane when he sees the blonde Miss Bennett aboard it, although he is on his vacation.

Such prominent screen actors as Zasu Pitts, John Howard, Bennie Bartlett, Grace Bradley, Alan Baxter, Ruth Donnelly and Fred Keating, support Joan Bennett and Fred MacMurray in "Thirteen Hours by Air."



Benny Meroff

Benny Meroff and His Orchestra are known as the world's most versatile musical organization. They will take over the Metropolitan stage with their spectacular production. Featured among the long list of entertainers with the Meroff crew are Florence Gast, famous person ality singer and dancer, Jack Marshall, Larry Powell, Jeffrie Hid, the Swigel, Babe Laval, Lanham and Lake with the Mc Carthy Sisters, Peter Ray and the Meroff Glee Club.

Benny, of course, will do some of his specialty numbers, in addition to leading his band. These

Congress Nears REASONABLE LIMIT ON Taxes, Spending

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, April 1—A little thought about what is going on in Congress leads to two conclusions. One is that we are nearing the limits of reasonable taxation. The other is that we are also nearing the limits of government spending.

Let us examine the evidence, and see where this situation may lead.

* * *

I do not mean to say that we are raising the maximum amount of taxes that would be possible. What I mean is that the time is at hand when people are beginning to "kick" more strenuously, which means that the politicians feel compelled to go slow.

It has been clear for a long while that the local tax burdens upon real estate have reached the limit, as shown by growing delinquincy.

Now the time has come when the burden of "indirect" taxes is being felt more keenly. The attitude of congressmen toward imposing excise taxes on articles of consumption is an evidence of this.

With cigarettes, gasoline, etc., so heavily loaded, it is becoming harder to find fresh "nuisance" taxes that the people will bear patiently.

The proposal to make corporation dividends subject to the "normal" income tax of 4 per cent strikes lower down in the income scale and hits more people of moderate means.

* * *

At the same time, signs are not lacking that some doubts about larger government spending are arising.

Mr. Roosevelt, who led in initiating the spending spree, now shows some tendency to "soft pedal" and insist on taxes to meet additional spending.

The administration is obviously trying to shift the public debt into longer-term bonds, which is an admission that it will have to strengthen government credit by real progress toward a balanced budget.

Administration officials must surely be aware of the growing demoralization of the WPA army and those "on relief." More and more these unfortunates are coming to regard government-created "work" as a right, and to demand relatively high "wages" regardless of their productivity.

* * *

The realization is at hand that if the government is to be the big employer, the government officials will be up against problems of all employers. They will face the discontent of labor. There is a big kickback in the assumption of the position of boss and wage payer.

* * *

It seems to me that there are two alternatives. One is to cut down on government spending by abandoning the bonuses paid to farmers, substituting direct relief for the wasteful WPA, etc. The other is likely to be an increasingly discriminatory burden of taxation which will be designed to "redistribute wealth."

If the spending is to be kept up, it will develop as a matter of practical politics that the funds will be taken away from those who have anything to take—they are the minority.

At bottom, what we are doing is to live on the savings of the past. In every conceivable way, it has been made undesirable to save now, and to a growing extent the burden of government spending is being imposed upon individual and corporate "reserves." And as fewer people are productively employed, the burden becomes greater and more concentrated, until finally the reserves are exhausted—the savings are gone.

* * *

You see, when we use our resources in building public buildings, needless roads, etc., which do not pay, we use up our resources in ways which add little or nothing to the necessaries which millions lack. No sensible individual or corporation would do these things. The government, however, taxes wealth or inflates the currency, and thus gets "forced loans" or contributions out of individual savings. These it dissipates.

If the needy require food and clothes, wouldn't it be better to have them make food and clothes?

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

The attractive blue and gold wing honor banner, bearing the Junior Birdmen insignia, will be awarded for the quarterly period beginning today at the anniversary party of the Leaping Lenas squadron in Parlin Junior High school, Broadway, Everett, tonight.

Either the Leaping Lenas, commanded by John E. Jacobs, or the Flying Hawks squadron of John W. Lithrop school, Dorchester, commanded by Morris Landy, will be the winner.

John E. Jacobs

These squadrons have engaged in their usual keen race, far outdistancing rival units. The Lenas are present holders of the banner, being the only squadron to win it for two consecutive quarters.

THE PROGRAM

The banner is awarded every three months to the most active unit through a point system.

The anniversary party has involved probably the most ambitious plans ever provided for a Junior Birdmen squadron event. Aviation films, including one supplied by United Air Lines; music by the Everett WPA band of 25 pieces, demonstration of model planes and talks by aviation figures will make up the program in addition to the awarding of the honor flag.

The speakers will include Lieutenant John T. Griffin and "Al" Mathison of East Coast Airways; John E. Wheelock, Boston manager, American Air Lines, and L. F. Ross, Boston wing commander, Junior Birdmen.

Eugens Blevins and Leslie C. Woodman will demonstrate model planes. Commander John E. Jacobs of the Leaping Lenas will open the meeting and Randolph C. Wills, sponsor, will preside.

HAWKS AS GUESTS

Miss Esther E. Larsen, sponsor of the Flying Hawks, will be a special guest together with members of her squadron.

More than 500 adults and children are expected

Co-operation of Everett school and city officials as well as merchants was won through the aid of the Leaping Lenas' adult council, consisting of Nathan Bronski, Chester Card and Wills. All Junior Birdmen are invited. Each must wear his wings to be admitted.

REPORT N. E. Business TREND

SHOE OUTPUT AT NEW TOP

The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston reported today shoe production in New England during the first two months of 1936 was larger than in these two months combined for any year since 1923.

The average daily number of bales of raw cotton consumed by New England mills decreased 6.1 per cent between January and February, the report stated, and in the latter month was 12.5 per cent less than in February, 1935.

The Federal Reserve Bank said the amount of raw cotton consumed in New England generally changes but little between the two months.

* * *

"The number of pairs of shoes produced in New England factories during February was slightly larger than in January and was about 8 per cent larger than in February a year ago," the statement showed.

"The level of general business activity in New England during February declined slightly from the January level, after customary seasonal changes were made.

"In both January and February of the current year, however, the levels were moderately higher than in the corresponding months a year ago.

* * *

"Distribution, as represented by department store sales in New England during the first two months of 1936, was more than 10 per cent higher than in that period last year, the January sales volume exceeding the previous January by 8.4 per cent and the February volume being 13.7 per cent larger.

"The average daily consumption of raw wool by mills in this district increased between January and February and was larger in each month than in the corresponding months a year ago. The increase between January and February this year, however, was less than usually which usually occurs between these two months.

"The value of total new building contracts awarded in New England during February was considerably larger than in the corresponding month last year. A seasonally corrected index representing the volume (square feet) of residential building contracts awarded in this district during February was 27.1 per cent of the 1923-25 average, as compared with 28.8 per cent in January and 12.5 per cent in February, 1935."

COTTON AGAIN Declines

New York, April 1 (INS)—Profit-taking on yesterday's late advance depressed cotton futures moderately at the opening today, causing losses ranging to 30 cents a bale in the March contract, which showed the widest decline in the previous session.

Announcement that the government pool intended to liquidate more of its spot holdings was also a factor in the decline. The trade, Liverpool and the Far East were buyers against selling by the south and the continent.

MARGIN Rule Changed TODAY

NEW SCALE PUT INTO EFFECT

The new Federal Reserve Board margin rules requiring a customer of brokerage firms to put up a flat 55 per cent of current market value in purchasing a stock listed on a registered security exchange, goes into effect today.

This regulation replaces the former sliding scale of rates ranging from 25 to 55 per cent of market value or 100 per cent of the lowest price since July 1, 1933.

The new 55 per cent margin affects all stocks regardless of their market prices, but applies only to new marginal transactions made commencing today.

* * *

The same margin basis has been fixed for purchases of similar listed stocks through banks. The new rule applying to purchases through banks does not become effective until May 1.

The new restrictions on customer margins in brokerage accounts is not retroactive and the rules do not require that the 55 per cent margin be "kept good" at all times.

In other words, after the original purchase, brokers may carry their customers to the limit of the stock exchange's own minimum requirements.

* * *

At present the exchange requires that the minimum margin must amount to "at least 30 per cent of the debit balance in the account in the case of accounts having a debit balance of more than $3000 and to at least 50 per cent of the debit balance in the case of accounts having a debit balance of $5000 or less."

Alberta Defaults Bond Interest

Edmonton, Alta., April 1 (AP)—The province of Alberta failed today to redeem two bond issues totaling $3,200,000.

In other Alberta unit, elected to office on a social credit platform, announced:

"We haven't the money; I'm sorry, but we must default."

Alberta is the first province in Canada to default on a bond maturity. The bonds were redeemable in Edmonton, Toronto and Montreal.

Hope for federal assistance faded in Ottawa at midnight when the Dominion government's authority to loan money to provinces not endorsing the provincial loan council plan expired.

Two cabinet meetings here yesterday failed to find a solution to the debt payment problem.

Thus Alberta became potentially the first province in the Dominion to default on a bond issue. If default is to be avoided, some action must be taken during banking hours today.

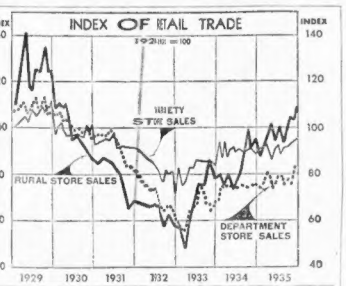
RETAIL TRADE



INCREASES All Types Report Gains

The Department of Commerce recently announced that retail trade rose 14 per cent last year, the total volume amounting to 32.6 billion dollars or approximately two-thirds that of 1929.

The three indices of store sales presented in the chart may be considered as the most important measures of the cross section buying power of the American public.

As a measure of part of the general merchandise business we include department store sales. These stores are concentrated in the larger cities and represent a relatively high price range, but their sales present only a partial reflection of general merchandise sales as a whole.

Variety store sales derive into the smaller communities, and a lower price range.

Rural stores constitute the sales of general merchandise and those of groceries throughout the rural and farming communities of the country.

Variety store sales showed only a small increase last year over 1934 but they are nearer their 1929 level than the other two groups. Department store sales made consistent gains in 1935.

Reported increases in the agriculture sections of the country and the rural store sales to the highest level since 1930.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, April 1—American Radiator's annual report for 1935 contains some interesting statements concerning the extent of residential building.

It emphasizes that the number of families which obtained new quarters during the boom in residential building the last year or so is considerably less than the number provided for 10 years ago.

In the earlier period, of course, the expansion was in big apartment dwellings whereas at present the demand is for single or two-family houses. The company's report states that in 287 identical cities 22,000 families were provided with new residential accommodations in 1934 and in 1935 this jumped to 56,000, a good gain, but far below the figure of ten years ago. In the same 287 cities in 1925 residential accommodations were provided for 197,000 families. In other words, despite the good gain last year, the figure was still about 88 per cent below ten years earlier.

Rockefeller Fund Investment Policy

General Education Board, a Rockefeller sponsored organization, made a few changes in its investment portfolio in the year ended last June, according to the annual report just made public. Deletions for the most part were represented by maturities and these were reached by others. Analysis of the ledger value of holdings of stocks and bonds on June 30 last totaled $60,974,999, of which $24,788,903 was in bonds and $36,186,096 was in stocks. A year earlier the total was $63,750,805 of which bonds made up $27,004,876 and stocks $36,725,929. The only issue added to the stock portfolio was 8206 shares of Motion Corp. common carried on the books at $77,013.

Gulf States Steel Directors Upheld

Gulf States Steel securities were unaffected yesterday by the victory for the management at the annual meeting of stockholders on Monday. Five directors were re-elected, the vote being in effort by the Republic Steel Corp. to obtain control of the company through proxies. Republic Steel Corp. is the owner of Gulf States stock for some time and is reported to have sought support from several important shareholders for the purpose of electing its own board of directors. Several years ago Cyrus H. Eaton, of Cleveland, attempted to merge Gulf States with Republic.

Smith Asks Power Rate Comparison

Washington, April 1 (AP)—A compilation of statistics showing the comparative cost of electric power in New England and in other sections was suggested today by Representative J. Joseph Smith of Connecticut.

His proposal followed distribution of letters from Florence, Ala., urging New England industries to transfer to that city. The letter's authors claimed lower power rates prevailed in the Southern city than in the Northeast.

Smith said he had a letter from David T. Lilienthal, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, declaring the rates quoted were inaccurate.

"If the New England Council has not already done so," Smith wrote Dudley Harmon, the council's executive vice-president, "I suggest that it prepare a schedule comparing the power rates in New England with those of the Tennessee Valley Authority and also a schedule of the New England power rates as compared with those of private concerns in the Western and Southern sections.

"Such schedules, I believe, would be of material assistance in presenting the correct information on power rates charged in the New England area as compared with other sections of the country."

FORM Bond Committee

A bondholders protective committee consisting of Robert Amory, Thomas P. Beal, and Francis C. Gray has been formed to represent the holders of the Houghton & Dutton Second Trust bonds.

The Second National Bank of Boston is depositary for the committee and will receive deposits of bonds from residents of Massachusetts.

Sugar Exports

New York, April 1—Lamborn & Co. states that Cuban sugar exports for the period Jan. 1-March 28 totaled 1,000,000 tons, raw value, compared with 800,718 during the corresponding period of last year, an increase of 248,740 tons.

Power Output Up for Week

New York, April 1 (AP)—The Associated Press index of electric power production advanced for the week ended March 28 to 102.6 from 102.2 that revised the previous week.

Edison Electric Institute reports electric output for the week ended March 28 was 2,407,005,000 kilowatt hours, showing a centra-seasonal rise of 2 of 1 per cent over the preceding week, and a gain of 9 per cent over the corresponding period of 1935. For the week ended March 21 the gain over the corresponding week of the previous year was 8 per cent.

All of the major geographic regions showed increases over last year. Percentage gains were: New England, 14; Middle Atlantic 10.4; Central Industrial, 6.7; West Central, 11.2; Southern States, 10; Rocky Mountain, 16.2; Pacific Coast, 16.5.

British United Shoe

Report of the British United Shoe Machinery Company, Ltd., controlled by United Shoe Machinery Corporation of America, shows net profit of 1691,961 for the year ended December 31, 1935. This is a new record and compares with net profit of £510,409 in the year ended December 31, 1934.

RAPID Recovery in EUROPE

HOME TRADE RESPONSIBLE

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

New York, April 1—Recognition that post-war industrialization of hitherto backward countries has changed the international trade setup has caused increased emphasis in former important exporting countries, including England, Germany and Belgium, on the building up of their internal market.

This leads to increased tendency to focus on developing domestic living standards, and American executives, who have been in those countries recently, are impressed with progress made.

The growing prosperity in England, for example, is especially striking, and marks a substantial rise above the 1929 level despite the lack of a corresponding increase in British exports.

Ever since Great Britain definitely turned away from her free trade ideas in 1931, recovery has proceeded. Some think progress could be even more rapid if Britain were not compromising on economic nationalism through concessions to imperial preference.

The British program includes rebuilding domestic agriculture, in order to establish a balanced home economy.

It is interesting that, within the framework of her traditional democratic political system, Britain is able to make progress along these lines. This point is of vital importance, and will help historians to understand what is happening in Germany, divorcing the economic program from the political dictatorship and misconceptions, it is believed, which are irrelevant to the Frederick List conception of a national economy.

Incidentally, recovery in this country has been associated with the improved balance between industry and agriculture since 1933. President Roosevelt is committed to a maintenance of this parity and has not departed, nor Republican aspirants likewise are.

The practical question nevertheless remains whether the new legislation in substitution for the AAA will be effective in assuring parity. Secretary Wallace recently admonished that overproduction of agricultural crops might upset the existing relationships. Wholly apart from political implications, it is pivotal to watch the prospects for agricultural prices and income as a key to future domestic recovery.

Seasonal conditions are favorable for a further expansion of residential construction. In 1935 the downward trend was reversed, and new residential construction on a foreign basis increased 105 per cent over the 1934 record. On the other hand, 1935 construction was only 23 per cent of the amount added in 1925.

A spokesman for an outstanding company in the building trades, in gauging the prospects, said:

"Today there is not only an actual shortage of shelter, but the need for improving substandard housing. The construction of improved housing, especially for people in the lower brackets of income, has become an outstanding social necessity that should not be longer neglected.

"Home building offers a means, proven by experience of stimulating all industries to sound activity. An adequate building program would provide work, directly and indirectly, for at least three to four million of the unemployed.

"Heating and plumbing supplies, for example, are now 20 per cent lower in price than in 1935, notwithstanding the fact that wage scales are approximately as high as they were in that highly prosperous year."

ALLIED CHEMICAL Report Studied

Spencer Trask & Co. completed yesterday a study and comparative financial summary of the Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation on the basis of the annual report for 1935, which was published by the corporation last week.

The study includes a comparative tabulation of the consolidated general balance sheets, the consolidated income accounts and the surplus accounts for the years 1920, 1925, 1930 and annually thereafter.

Contract Awarded

A contract for 200 14-cylinder radial engines to cost $1,877,000, has been awarded to Pratt & Whitney subsidiary of United Aircraft Corporation, the war department announced.

BOSTON FIRM

Observes EIGHTY-FIFTH Birthday

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The investment banking house of Estabrook & Co., of Boston and New York, is observing its 85th anniversary this week.

Founded in 1851 under the name of Brewster, Sweet & Co., the firm has played a notable part in historic events in the investment banking world.

At the start of its career, the firm did considerable business in gold arriving from the newly discovered California fields. Later on it was largely identified with the governmental financing of the civil war. Since then its activities have grown to include all the recognized branches of investment banking. It has been a member of the Boston Stock Exchange since 1851 and the New York Stock Exchange since 1878.

The general situation in textile markets of the country is reported as materially better, according to advices received by the writer from the Shoe and Leather Reporter. At the same time reports are current in the Boston shoe district that indicate business prospects are improving in the past week, despite the floods and consequent damage. Inquiry for all types of leather has broadened under the influence of shortening supplies, prices are firmer and sellers inclined to ask advances.

Notebook: The two best acting stocks on the board are those we noted here a few weeks ago as subject to foreign buying . . . Montgomery Ward and General Motors . . . Which British investors reported to be taking in good volume on the advice of broker returned from an American tour . . . Sears Roebuck has been slow about coming along in here . . . But that smart jump in March sales means real profits . . . Incidentally these statistically minded might consider that Sears upped its net 42 per cent in '35 on a sales gain of 23 per cent.

At times a scarcity is more confusing than an abundance. And as it seems with the stock market at the moment. Lack of trading activity and a paucity of issues interesting to newsprint and investment interests. Generally during a bull swing the financial pages are able to put on a better show than the rails. We think this may be attributed to the varied interests represented in the group. The rail group, strictly one industry, moves more as a unit and often lags. So it is at present.

* * *

Rail Observations: With the above as a background let's consider recent volume. It has been very small and has been bemoaned . . . But this development coincides with widening tendencies in the rails even though industrials struggle higher . . . Industrials are flirting with new highs and if the rails can begin to trace an upward zig-zag pattern at the same time with a pickup in volume a general feature the behavior of the last two weeks would look reassuring when viewed in retrospect . . . We would accept such action in lieu of new highs in both groups.

The building industry is not in the high fancy of a few months ago. Some observers seem to feel that many issues have over-discounted actual prospects. Be this as it may we continue to believe there are many opportunities in the industry. One of these appears to be Thompson Starrett. We understand that the company now appears to be in a position to resume dividends on its preferred. The stock is entitled to $3.50 annually and last year's earnarages total $13.25, as of today. Both the preferred and common seem worthy watching at current.

UNION PACIFIC Gross Higher

Current operating revenues of the Union Pacific are running 8 per cent to 10 per cent or more ahead according to Carl R. Gray, president. The crop outlook and general business conditions in the territory are more favorable than at this time last year.

Wages revenue for March is expected to be well above the $9,757,674 of March a year ago, net operating income only slightly better than $1,241,688, the figure for March, 1935, is expected.

Sears Offers Stock

At annual meeting of Sears, Roebuck & Co. on April 27 stockholders will be asked to authorize an increase in capital stock from 5,000,000 shares to 5,200,000. The 200,000 additional shares are to be offered at discretion of directors to a large number of the employes at $45 a share.

STOCK Prices Turn HIGHER

NEWS FAVORS BUYERS

New York, April 1— Stocks pressed forward at a little faster gait today, with many issues climbing fractions to round 3 points, some to new highs for the past five years.

In the forefront of the advance were the steels, motors, rails oils and specialties.

Buying was fairly general throughout, and was attracted by the plethora of favorable business reports and the new production program issued by Hitler to the Locarno powers late today.

Steels and motors were pacemakers, gains here ranging from 2 to 3 points. A bullish front Age report, which also estimated April automobile production at 500,000 units, was the principal factor.

General Motors started more than a point to 69, the best level since 1929, while Chrysler gained nearly as much. Bethlehem Steel moved up 2 points before encountering realizing, with Bethlehem and Otis close behind.

Utilities came to the fore around noon, under the lead of Columbia Gas & Electric and Consolidated Edison, each moving nearly a point above previous closings. Power output last week was 9 per cent above a year ago, against 5 per cent the week before.

Standard Oil of N. J., Atlantic Refining and Texas Corp. were buoyant in oils, reflecting the first decline in gasoline stocks since November, 1935, Atlantic Refining set a new 1935-36 high.

Steel Production

Business and industrial news tended to buoy the spirits of bullish forces.

The weekly steel review of Iron Age confirmed earlier estimates of a sharp upturn in mill operations following the interruption caused by the floods.

Steel production currently, it was stated, has risen to 62% per cent of capacity, the highest rate since June, 1930. The average daily output was placed at more than 137,000 tons.

A further rise was anticipated in order to take care of the recent high volume of orders placed for finished steel products against first quarter contracts. Beyond the forthcoming week the survey said, it was impossible to predict the production trend because it was not known how much the schedules are being influenced by post-flood adjustments and late coverage of low-priced quarterly contracts.

In addition to the steel rebound the Edison Institute noted a considerable increase in electric power production for the week ended March 28.

The French franc at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions was up .00½ of a cent at 6.59½ cents, and sterling was ¼ of a cent firmer at $4.95⅞.

Comments of Brokers

While a worthy stimulus is being awaited, backing and filling action seems to constitute the market's pattern.—J. S. Bache & Co.

In the event a spring advance gets underway before one, which is a distinct possibility just so long as the industrials hold above the 151 level, we could expect the oils to feature trading, along with the motors.—J. E. Molloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

The railroad equipment companies bring to attention the unusual beneficiaries of the anticipated improvement in rail earnings, even though the pace of recovery is slow, heavy steel companies also appear in line for some good rail business if traffic gains the expected expansion.—Josephthal & Co.

Ability of stocks to lift slightly above recent reaction lows is only mildly encouraging. Believe further worthwhile progress now in market as a whole will be difficult.—H. D. Conner, Paine, Webber & Co.

The factors affecting market sentiment should improve and the feeling so there is reason for confidence that a new high for the market recovery is not far off.—J. P. Maher, Shields & &Co.

Earnings Improved

Probably due principally to increased volume in lines outside of the automotive field, first-quarter reports of the leading automobile parts markers in this area Borg-Warner Corp., Bendix Aviation Corp. and Stewart-Warner Corp.—are likely to show some what larger profits than for the initial three months of 1935.

X-RAY
Examination, consultation and trial treatment absolutely FREE to all who call before April 5th. The X-ray and mercury quartz light treatment is accomplishing wonders in female troubles. No matter what your disease, Dr. Walsh, M. D., fulfills the above offer.

ANAEMIC
Mrs. Betty McDonough, 21 Caufield St., Dorchester, Mass., says—"I had suffered with colds, rheumatism and nerve exhaustion for years. I was run down, had no appetite, constantly ailing, rheumatism in my hands. Had been treated, but got no relief. I became tired, discouraged and dizzied. Finally my brother-in-law told me of Dr. Walsh and how he had helped others. I took Dr. Walsh's treatment and feel like a new woman. It takes pleasure in recommending Dr. Walsh to all in need of the services of a reliable physician."
Signed, Betty McDonough.

American Achievement

NATURE'S WAY IS HEALTH, and prosperity is, as James Speyer once remarked, the normal status for the United States.

All the ingredients for full recovery are at hand except a constructive mental attitude.

Millions are still denied employment because a perverted, destructive type of thinking dominates our present political leadership.

The New Deal has turned from men of achievement to doctrinaire critics imbued with Old World ideas and theories.

Once the restraints which they have imposed on American builders and prosperity makers have been removed there can be a resumption of the American dream of each year seeking to raise living standards to new peaks.

RECALLING the characteristics which made the American system the fine example for the entire world, Garet Garrett, in the Saturday Evening Post, points out:

"It was American industry that discovered the wage earner as a consumer.

"It was American industry that first perceived the importance of sustaining the wage earner's buying power with higher and higher wages, else the increasing products of industry could not be sold.

"It was American thinking that invented the term 'standard of living' and a way to measure its rise.

"The idea of abolishing poverty, therefore, was a practical idea to begin with, and the American system invented it.

"How absurd, then, to indict the American achievement on the ground that poverty still survives —that in a few years, say, one generation, it failed to abolish that immemorial evil completely, as it had already abolished famine!

"We had gone toward it so far, however, that our ideas of poverty had changed.

"When now we speak of poverty we do not mean abject wretchedness. We mean anything less than a comfortable state of living."

IN ORDER to recover, we Americans need to cast the mist from our eyes.

We need to drive from high places the leadership of defeatism and of carping criticism.

In order to go places nationally we need in government and in business a revival of the pioneer American, go-getter spirit.

More than any other public man, Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas appeals as a symbol of the authentic American tradition.

The extraordinary spontaneous interest in the man is explained by the fact that he typifies the spirit of American enterprise, progressivism and self-help.

Under a genuinely American leadership, such as Governor Landon typifies, there would be the psychological basis for thoroughgoing economic recovery.

There could be under such a change effective teamwork between government and business in the broad effort to achieve full steam ahead.

"So I Will, So I Command!"

UNDER this Administration what is sauce for the goose is NOT sauce for the gander.

It has no compunctions in publishing the salaries of CORPORATION EXECUTIVES.

It does not have a rush of conscience to the brain when it comes to seizing and opening PRIVATE TELEGRAMS in violation of the Constitution and the common law of decency.

But when Senator Vandenburg introduces into the Senate, and Representative Taber introduces into the House, a bill PROVIDING FOR THE PUBLICATION OF THE NAMES AND ADDRESSES OF ALL PERSONS WHO HAVE RECEIVED IN EXCESS OF $10,000 A YEAR FROM THE GOVERNMENT FOR AAA BENEFITS, Chester Davis, head of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, denounces the bills as an INFRINGEMENT OF GUARANTEED INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS!

Just why the PRIVATE BUSINESS of A FARMER is more sacred than a newspaper proprietor's or the owner of an automobile factory is not explained by Mr. Davis—and WILL NOT BE.

Its motto is the motto of the Caesars:

"SO I WILL, SO I COMMAND!"

April Fool—No Foolin'

The Democratic National Committee has issued a "clip sheet" for use by the partisan press in which is an editorial naively suggesting that the Roosevelt "Raw Dealers," by SPENDING money, are MAKING money. There are a number of similar "news" items in the sheet.

The date for "release" of the sheet is APRIL 1, Honest it is, NO FOOLIN'.

Time for Wrath

By Nelson Harding

Two blackened eyes is what the bill
Gets from the Black Committee
Which should arouse our righteous wrath
And not bring forth our pity.

The brief case with its personal
And private telegrams
Has been cleaned out by those who say:
"We are the Great I Ams!"

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

Strong, reckless men had but one desire when I was a youngster on the western frontier. "They wished "to die with their boots on."

Once, sneaking under the swinging half-door of Keenan's Golden Rule Saloon and peering between the elbows of a milling crowd, I saw a local hero whose wish had been granted.

He lay sprawled upon the floor —a great, hairy, mountain of a man, his flaming beard still flecked from his last schooner of beer.

Others were discussing the nicety of the shot that had laid him low, but my interest centered on his shoes. I had never been able to understand that craving to "die with my boots on."

WHAT WAS THERE ABOUT BOOTS — THESE, FOR INSTANCE? DUSTY, SHABBY, KNEE-HIGH AFFAIRS, SCARRED AND STAINED BY A HUNDRED TRAILS, SCUFFED AT THE TOE AND WORN AT THE HEEL—WHY HAD HE WANTED TO DIE IN THOSE?

DREADED SAFETY

It was years after I found the answer . . . but I came at last to see that only those who die with their boots on have really lived. To have lived with his boots on—that was the great point to the red-headed man.

Death was only an accident. He had always gone shod for adventure.

He had chosen to go shod like that. Chosen boots instead of bedroom slippers or dancing pumps

HE WANTED TO LIVE INSIDE AND OUT—TO THINK HIS OWN DECISIONS, RUN HIS OWN RISKS, TAKE HIS OWN BLAME.

Perhaps some of his thoughts and decisions were far from admirable. He was, I guess, a pretty bad man, as we judge these things. But he'd—lived. And he wouldn't wake up on the other side and cry "Why didn't I take a chance?" And then cuss in his beard because he hadn't.

He had died—and he had lived—with his boots on. And the dust and the scars on those battered boots were, to him, marks of honorable venture. He'd have hated to have gone out, with the bedclothes tucked neatly under his chin and his feet on a hot water bag.

DIED WITH BOOTS ON

Perhaps you condemn him, but many others have chosen to die —and to live—like that. They were not always to be found in mining camps. Some, through force of circumstances, spent all their days at quiet jobs on a humdrum street. . . . some sat in the difficult seats of the mighty, BUT THEY ALL LIVED AND DIED WITH THEIR BOOTS ON.

It wasn't easy. People called them fools—or worse. They could have had a much softer and more profitable time if they had been willing to compromise and alibi and evade, like more cautious folk. BUT THEY REFUSED.

AND THEY DIED IN THE THICK OF THINGS WITH THEIR TRAVELING BOOTS STILL ON.

Which seems to me a proud, free way to do.

They sent their soul out upon strange trails. They braved the danger and the dust. They were ready always to shoot it out with life on any issue.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, April 1—The town is going thoroughly Russian again in its restaurant taste. The furore of eight years ago, when every midtown block boasted a Muscovite cafe conducted by a royal prince or princess, died as quickly as it was born. Now the idea attains fresh fury.

It was touched off when Vincent Astor's ex-brother-in-law, Prince Obolensky, sponsored the Maisonette Russe in the rejuvenated St. Regis. It was a sort of glorified collarette, a throw-back to the days of Moscow splendor. A borsch and caviar cave that clicked from the kick-off.

The Sherry-Netherland has a like establishment presided over by the celebrated General Lodijesky, who used to receive the lion-tose so graciously at the Russian Eagle, long the leader of this type of eating place. The general is also to re-open the Russian Eagle.

Two other Russian places are being rendied on West 57th street and there are already a half dozen in the Grand Central zone. The Russian spots are usually in red and gold, candle lit and featuring unobtrusive accordionists and guitarists strolling from table to table.

Two of the most enthusiastic hedge collectors in the country are Morton Downey, the tenor, and Joe Laurie, Jr., the comedian. This has been their hobby for a number of years. Downey specializes in police and fire badges and always carries a number in his coat pocket.

Laurie, who has worn a cap all his life, plays no favorites, every sort of badge from the celluloid cigarette button to the huge Rotarian symbol is his dish. His vest is usually decorated with a half dozen or so.

Peggy Fears, whose boundless energy seems to include a round of the popular spots nightly, has acquired a thoroughly Tahitian get-up which brings a full and sudden stop to the conversational buzz wherever she appears.

Miss Fears' gait is a long stride and she arrives with a swoop, her hair flying, long, thick, loose. Her ensemble is an exotic creation of sequin bowers. And she has been tanned to a Polynesian tint.

Nearly every motion picture star has an almost insurmountable hurdle in recording voice for the talkies. Kay Francis' stumbler is the letter S. She cannot make a word with that letter sound right, no matter how hard she tries. So dialogue writers skillfully turn out parts for her that contain the minimum of that fatal letter.

When Percy Hammond was in Hollywood the first time recently he met, among others, Jean Harlow. In the course of conversation Miss Harlow wondered why she could not be a success as a dramatic actress on the stage. With mock gravity, Hammond told her it was because she had no sex appeal.

A group of her friends listening in took the observation seriously and went deeply into a discussion. Hammond, not sure whether he was being kidded or not, huffed and puffed, then fled.

Incidentally, the real purpose of John O'Hara's visit to Hollywood is said to have nothing to do with writing for the movies. His mission is to write a novel about Hollywood that will end all novels about Hollywood. And perhaps the briefest literary visit to the cinema capital lately was that of Katharine Brush. She remained three days.

Richard Outcault, the cartoonist, on a relaxing evening once walked up to Considine's bar with DeWolf Hopper and, before downing his drink, gravely slapped his uppers and lowers on the mahogany. Not to be outdone, Hopper lifted off his toupe and placed it alongside. A lonely Englishman, watching a few feet away, sidled up and said: I would like jolly well to get in this, Cheerio? And plopped down a glass eye among the trophies.

What Would You Do?

By Winifred Black

One hundred million dollars! Whew, doesn't it make you gasp —$100,000,000!

What would you do with it if you had it? What wouldn't you do?

It would mean travel, books, music, pictures, thousands of friends, all kinds of friends, rich and poor, old and young, furs, four or five coats, all different, and capes and jackets and wraps.

And, you could have long, slinky evening frocks with trains, soft clinging day dresses, shoes, gold slippers, silver slippers and satin slippers, with big rosettes; and velvet slippers, with jeweled heels; and smart shoes for walking, and soft shoes for comfort — dear, dear, it makes your toes tingle even to think of them.

But the friend would be the best of all; oh, much the best of all.

All the little pale tired mothers and their pale, delicate children—wouldn't it be fun to have a yacht and take them all for a lovely visit to the South Seas?

You could have the ship full of balls and bats, tennis nets and tennis rackets, and go ashore and let them all swim, run, ride ponies and chase each other up and down the beach.

And the tired women who are sick of living, sick of the same old routine, over and over; sick of being poor and lonely and never noticed. Wouldn't it be glorious to give one of them money enough to take a year's vacation? A whole year, without a care and without a worry.

A woman died the other day. She was 88 years old and nobody in the block where she lived ever had heard her name, seen her or knew who she was.

And she left behind her $100,000,000. She never had married. I wonder if she wouldn't have given every dollar she had for a real husband, a real family of children, a real home and some plain everyday love and kindness —and quarrels and makings up.

Poor soul, she wasn't rich, really, was she, even if she did have $100,000,000?

American Government

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

There is hardly an American who doesn't hear arguments like the following being put forth on all sides:

"We call this a democracy! Why, England has a more democratic government than the United States! The country is too big for the Constitution. That document might have been all right when we had 13 States and 4,000,000 people, but how could anyone in 1787 make a plan for 1936, with its machine age and problems never dreamed of a century and a half ago?

"Nowhere in the Constitution does it say that the Supreme Court has the power to declare unconstitutional an act of Congress. There's no court in England which can overturn an act of Parliament."

There are many persons abroad who have the impression that the Constitution is a moss-covered book of rules and regulations which straitjackets the country and its progress. There are many more people who for their own reasons want to have that impression spread through the land.

BUILT FOR FUTURE

Believe it of not, as Mr. Ripley would say, these are the facts. The United States is not a democracy because a democracy is a form of government in which each citizen has a direct part in the government. The United States is a government by representation, a republic of 48 States which have surrendered certain specified powers as defined in a Federal Constitution.

The States have given up these powers in order that there might be a more perfect union, the establishment of uniform justice, common defense against aggression and the promotion of the general welfare.

The United States is greater by 35 states than it was in 1789 and yet it is much smaller in one important respect. You or I may travel today from the Atlantic to the Pacific in 12 hours. In 1789 it would have taken that much time to go from New York to Philadelphia, a mere 100 miles.

And if you don't think that the founders of this government foresaw the great growth of the nation, it may surprise you to know that Hamilton, in 1788, put down in black and white the prediction that within 50 years the House of Representatives probably would have 400 members. Today there are 450 odd. It was the custom in the colonies for the courts to pass on acts of the legislatures. In the Constitution we have these words:

"The judicial power shall extend to all cases in law and equity arising from the Constitution."

STATES, NOT MARSHALL

Alexander Hamilton, urging the adoption of the Constitution on the different States in 1788, wrote as follows, in the "Federalist," on the powers of the Supreme Court:

"Some perplexity respecting the rights of the court to pronounce legislative acts void, because contrary to the Constitution, has arisen from an imagination that the doctrine would imply a superiority of the judiciary to the legislative power. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts. A Constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by the judges as, fundamental law. It, therefore, belongs to them to ascertain its meaning, as well as the meaning of any particular act proceeding from the legislative body."

It was not Marshall who set up the power of the Supreme Court to pass on acts of Congress by his decision in the Marbury case in 1803. It was the 13 States which accepted Hamilton's exposition of the rights of the court, 13 States which agreed with Hamilton when he said:

"Until the people have, by some solemn and authoritative act, annulled or changed the established form, it is binding upon themselves, collectively and individually, and no presumption or even knowledge of their sentiments can warrant their representatives in a departure from it prior to such an act."

Michigan Goes Solvent

By Hon. Frank D. Fitzgerald

GOVERNOR OF MICHIGAN

In an Address Before the Advertising Club of New York, New York City.

Balancing a budget, working on a pay-as-you-go basis—in other words, THROWING THAT RED INK BOTTLE AWAY—is accomplished in government by the same simple processes that are employed in countless business enterprises and in millions of homes throughout the country, every day in the year.

You balance a budget BY KEEPING EXPENDITURES WITHIN YOUR INCOME and by putting your foot down HARD, every time someone comes along with a scheme which may seem plausible on its face, but which has the fatal defect of requiring that you mortgage future revenues: a scheme, in other words, which involves the expenditure of money that is not in sight.

The case of Michigan was not unlike that of many other states.

Bookkeeping with red ink had become a habit. She had become accustomed to the shifting and juggling of public funds.

Michigan got tired of all that.

She made known her demands. She wanted no more bond issues or debts in any other form; no new taxes; and NO EXPENDITURES IN EXCESS OF HER INCOME.

BOUND BY CONTRACT

Our State election of November, 1934, lodges in my memory, not so much as a political event (which I happened to be elevated to the office of Governor, but more as the negotiation of A CONTRACT BETWEEN THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE AND MYSELF, by the terms of which I was engaged for a period of two years as the business manager of Michigan.

I was specifically bound, by the terms of that contract, to carry out these demands for the establishment of an orderly system of business administration, based upon a balanced budget and a pay-as-you-go policy.

First, we determined how much money WOULD BE AVAILABLE for the operation of the State Government.

The estimate of the first year's revenue with which to meet the expenses of government was conservatively placed at $77,600,000. We could see that much. It was actually in sight.

Next, the contract demanded that we keep expenditures within that limit.

THE REAL TEST

The Michigan Legislature did not keep its total appropriations within the $77,600,000 limit. It exceeded this mark by about $4,000,000.

Then came our real test.

The movement for a balanced budget was threatened with the usual sidetracking.

It was a desperate situation, which threatened to scrap that solemn contract into which I had entered with the people of Michigan. I felt, therefore, that desperate action was justified.

During the last hours an amendment appeared in the General Appropriation Bill.

It gave to the Governor of Michigan AUTHORITY TO REDUCE APPROPRIATIONS pro rata, whenever they exceeded anticipated revenue.

Amid the confusion of that 11th hour of the session, the amendment passed.

Under its terms, I straightway ordered a blanket cut in all appropriations—a cut of 5 per cent, from the top to the bottom of the list. This pro rata reduction, coupled with certain vetoes, chopped the total appropriation down to $77,000,000—well within the $77,600,000 limit.

BALANCED BUDGET

From this point on the picture brightens. The financial year was divided into months, with monthly allotments for each department and each institution.

There were months when the expenditures were kept down below the allotted amount.

OUR ACTUAL EXPENDITURES FOR THE JANUARY 1 WERE $1,078,000 LESS THAN THE ESTIMATED REQUIREMENTS.

At the end of the year they were $4,876,000 more than we had counted upon.

We were spending less than we had expected to spend. We were taking in more than we expected —a combination most devoutly to be sought in these times, you'll admit.

THAT BALANCED BUDGET INCLUDED $9,000,000 FOR DIRECT WELFARE RELIEF, $2,000,000 FOR OLD AGE PENSIONS AND $1,300,000 FOR THE CARE OF CRIPPLED AND AFFLICTED CHILDREN.

It likewise allowed for some TAX REDUCTIONS, amounting t $5,300,000.

We conserved the people's tax dollar, but not at the expense of those unfortunates whom the State is obligated to shelter and protect.

The results of our financial policy can be stated briefly:

The general fund from which the operations of the State government are financed, was $6,692,000 IN THE RED, as of December 31, 1934.

One year later it was $5,086,000 IN THE BLACK.

We had definitely thrown the red ink bottle away!

We accomplished our purpose by following the plain, common sense rules that almost every one of us relies upon in our daily affairs.

We called in no super-men, no radio wizzard or no learned champions of new economic theories.

I see no reason why the machinery of popular government should not work the same way elsewhere, for other States, and for the nation as well.
